短文改错

It's said that school years are the best time of one's life. Whoever said that was probably an adult – one ^ who had forgotten the hard work of being at school. This is especially true for Senior 3 student / students, who are nearing the end of their high school experience. All the later / late nights and early starts will soon be worth (删除 of) it, as you get readily / ready for an important stage of our / your life.

With the heavy pressure and huge workload, it won't be surprising if you wonder whether you'll ever get through an / the experience. It's like be / being in the middle of a long tunnel with no sign of light at the end of it.

But people did / do survive – some even succeed in the face of real adversity or / and eventually see their shining light.

书面表达

One possible version:

Dear fellow citizens,

As everybody knows, animals such as dogs and cats are to human beings what friends are to us. However, what really worries us is the fact that some deserted dogs and cats can recently be seen in and around every corner of the street in our town, with little or even no food to feed on. Worse still, some can find no place for shelter during the cold night. Consequently, some are probably in poor health or get seriously ill, which will cause harm to our environment.

Here, I sincerely appeal to you to adopt them as your pets, providing them with food and a warm family and treating them as your friends. Furthermore, it is certain that they will, in return, bring you happiness and keep you company.
