Anna, my 10-year-old daughter, is on a wild ride with the United States Postal Service (USPS) and our mail carrier, Eason. She has a serious letter-writing habit and keeps in contact with her favorite people. If you've been the receiver of her hand-decorated letters and envelopes, then I know they really make your day.

A letter from Anna is likely to include some art, a joke and enough questions to guarantee a response. But when she wrote a letter to Eason, she put something new in it. "You may know me as the person living here that writes lots of letters. You're very important to me, helping me stay in touch with friends. I cheer people up with my letters, and you do that too!" Anna wrote.

The next day, a package arrived with two letters. One was from Eason and the other from his superior, Sara, saying she had shared Anna's letter in the internal newsletter (内部通讯) of the USPS and believed many postal folks wanted to thank Anna. Anna was so pleased with the letter that it perturbed me much, for the possible result of no reply from other mail carriers would come as a blow to her.

Surprisingly, today, we saw Eason come with two boxes of letters from around the country. These letters were so human, filled with stories about family, pets and a sense of kindness. But there was something more in them. People felt seen--- some for the first time in a long time. "I work alone in a small rural post office..." "Not many people think about how hard we work..." Anna wrote back seriously.

I'm sharing this not because I'm a proud dad, but because it's relatively easy, if we take the time, to give others links they need to be good. We all want to be seen, known and loved. Send a letter. Give a call. Take a step of bravery, like Anna.

24. Why did Anna write Eason a letter?
A. To make friends with him. B. To cheer him up.
C. To express her appreciation. D. To share her daily life.
25. What does the underlined word "perturbed" in Paragraph 3 probably mean?
A. Touched. B. Concerned. C. Moved. D. Astonished.
26. Which of the following words can best describe Anna?
A. Caring and grateful. B. Energetic and ambitious.
C. Courageous and generous. D. Capable and humorous.
27. What's the main idea of the passage?
A. People should face challenges with bravery.
B. People should care more about mail carriers.
C. People should connect with others actively.
D. People should show kindness to their parents.

To write his book about world diet, nutritionist Harley Paster traveled to the healthiest countries around the world to learn more about what made their meals special.

He noted that Japanese people ate a wonderful variety of seaweeds, and that Chinese people tried to include at least five different colors in every meal. Paster also came away with some valuable observations about how different the North American way of life was, compared with many other countries.

For starters, Americans eat much bigger portions than people in other countries. "We don't prioritize (优先) eating seasonally or locally, and we also add lots of salt, sugar and thickening agents to our foods," explained Paster. Contrast that to the healthy Mediterranean, Nordic and Okinawan diets listed in Paster's book. They all seem to stick to the ethos(特质) of regional, seasonal produce.

For example, a traditional Mediterranean diet includes fruits, vegetables, whole grains, nuts and olive oil as the main components of nutritional intake. Fish, chicken and red wine make appropriate appearances, while red meat, salt and sugar are used much less often. The benefits of a traditional Mediterranean diet have been studied since the 1970s, and researchers have found that living that olive oil life can help people lose weight, lower their heart disease risk and reverse diabetes (糖尿病). Most other healthy eating cultures also make meals an event—say, multiple courses around the family table, or a glass or two of red wine at a long lunch—rather than fast wolfing down handfuls of cereal above the kitchen sink and calling it dinner.

Each of the healthy eating cultures has its own unique feature. But Paster did take note of one unifying factor in all of the healthy societies he observed. "The only common feature in most of these healthy countries is that they all walk more than the average American," said Paster. So really, regardless of what you're eating, if someone's walking four miles more than you each day, they're going to be a lot thinner and live a lot longer than you."

28. What characterizes Japanese and Chinese foods?
A. Naturalness. B. Flavor. C. Color. D. Variety.
29. What features in Mediterranean, Nordic and Okinawan diets?
A. Fruits and vegetables. B. Seasonal local produce.

- C. The birds are main food for black rhinos.
D. The birds help rid rhinos of the ticks on their bodies.
34. How does the author show oxpeckers' anti-human benefit?
A. By giving an example. B. By telling a story.
C. By listing some data. D. By asking a question.
35. What's the text mainly about?
A. The reason for black rhinos' extinction. B. Measures possible to protect black rhinos.
C. Some facts related to red-billed oxpeckers. D. A win-win for black rhinos and oxpeckers.

An escape game, is a game in which a team of players discover clues, solve puzzles, and accomplish tasks in one or more rooms in order to accomplish a specific goal in a limited amount of time. The goal is often to escape from the site of the game. 36. _____.

Keep it simple

For most escape games, even the very challenging ones with very high difficulty ratings, the puzzles and clues are surprisingly simple. They are just cleverly hidden and worded to make them appear difficult to solve. Don't make things difficult by looking for complex solutions. 37. _____.

38. _____

Sometimes, the escape game creators add a puzzle to confuse players, but this hardly happens. As usual, every puzzle is important and each clue has the potential for revealing the key. Carefully analyze every puzzle you come across. Don't ignore any, as it may be central to achieving your goal of breaking out. If worse comes to worst, ask for a clue from the game master.

Think like a 4th grader

Escape games can get really challenging. To break out, you need to totally bury yourself in the game. Think outside the box and motivate all your creative juices. Remember when you were a kid and you would think up all these imaginative stories and situations. 39. _____. Think like a 4th grader and you'll find the game more enjoyable and the puzzles easier to solve.

Experiment with use zksq

Is the honey bucket just a metal thing filled with human waste or is there a clue under it? 40. _____. We get so stuck on how things are normally used that our minds refuse to think of alternative ways of using them. And just to ease your fears, no escape game will put you in a room with a bucket full of human waste. Like I mentioned earlier, use your imagination and think outside the box.

- A. Don't ignore escape game puzzles.
- B. You need to imagine you to be a 10-year-old child.
- C. You'd better play the game with a child.
- D. More often than not, the answer is right there staring you in the face.
- E. There are four tips to play escape games.
- F. Don't keep the excitement levels high.
- G. Or maybe, it can be turned upside down to use as a simple ladder.

More Trees, Greener School

第二节(满分 25 分)

阅读下面材料, 根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段, 使之构成一篇完整的短文。

Over the summer I moved from Texas to Missouri. This was my second year of high school, but my first year of school in Missouri. I was really nervous about starting a new school and having people like me. I decided that I would be much happier in a new school if I made friends that were so-called "popular". Getting in with the right group of people would make my life a whole lot better. I bought a new outfit so the first day would be perfect.

On the first day of school, scared, yet eager to begin my new life, I walked up the stairs. My first class was geometry, but where was that? I was standing in the hall looking confused, when a short, blond girl wearing glasses came up and asked, "Are you new? You look lost. Do you want me to help you find your class? My name is Diane. What's yours?" Even though she seemed a bit strange, definitely not the kind of person I wanted to be associated with, I decided to answer her anyway. I was, after all, lost.

After exchanging names, I followed her up the stairs and down a hallway on the right. When we reached my room she said, "Well, here you are. It was nice meeting you. I hope I see you again and your day goes all right."

I said a quick thank-you and waved good-bye. Once inside the classroom, I saw one big group of people huddled around someone who seemed to be telling some sort of story. I walked over and got close enough to overhear. All eyes were glued to the guy in the middle of the circle. I decided that this guy was popular.

A few minutes later the teacher told everyone to find a seat and get ready for the class. I managed to get one right next to the guy. I said, "Hi, my name is April and I'm new here." He said coldly, "Hi, I'm Johnny." That class dragged on and on. Finally, the bell rang. I turned to him and asked, "I'm not sure where my next class is, could you help me find it?" He looked at me and then said a quick no, turned back to his friends, and walked out of the classroom.

As they were walking out, I heard them all laughing at me.

Before I was ready to go home, I heard a familiar voice calling my name.
