第四部分 写作（共两节，满分 40 分）

第一节（满分 15 分）

One possible version:

Dear fellow students,

Recently it's common to see some uncivilized practices on campus such as littering and wasting resources. I, on behalf of the Student Union, would like to call on everyone to contribute to an eco-friendly campus.

Firstly, we should make recycling as easy as possible. A simple way to do this is bearing garbage classification in mind, throwing different kinds of waste into different dustbins.

Secondly, conserve water, electricity and paper. For example, turn off the tap and the lights when not in use, and reuse used paper on the back, thus reducing waste of resources.

Let's make the campus a greener place! Only through joint efforts can we achieve this goal.

The Student Union

第二节（满分 25 分）

One possible version:

With a smile on his face, his father sat beside Martin, which made the young boy a little nervous. He was afraid that his father would blame him and thought he didn't do well enough. But he mustered his courage to ask his father, "Dad, why can you focus your attention on your researches for that long?" Gently patting him on the shoulder, his father answered, "Easy. Interest. Dream. I hope to find a new world by researching. When I was young like you, I knew I would be a scientist. And I believe interest makes me concentrate. Would you like to be a good flute player?"

Martin felt ashamed and then he nodded, saying he hoped to be a flute performer. Yes, actually, it was he who was so interested in the flute that he asked his mother to buy one. Of course, he should devote himself to the flute to get himself improved. Concentrating on his interest and making efforts to realize his dream to become a good flute player undoubtedly are his top priorities. Thinking of this, he smiled and began to set his mind to his flute. So lost in the playing was he that he forgot about the time. Thirty minutes passed in a flash. At that time, Martin realized that while there are many things making people absent-minded, the love of our dreams can make a difference.

Text 1

M: I went to the art gallery the day before yesterday, but it was closed. I wonder why?

W: Oh, it's always closed on Saturday, but it stays open on Sunday.

Text 2

W: What did Michael do after graduating from university?

M: He considered advertising, accounting and even a lawyer before he settled on teaching. He's been doing that ever since.

Text 3

W: Do you know Linda's new address? She's got some mail here, and I'd like to send it to her.

M: Well, we haven't been in touch for quite a while. Sally should know it.

Text 4

W: Tell me what the problem is

M: When I turn it on, the picture is in color, but after one or two minutes, it's in black and white.

Text 5

M: The film is very good. Shall we meet at 8:00 pm at the entrance of the cinema?

W: All right. But how can I get there?

M: When you get out of the station, turn left and then keep walking until you come to a church. The cinema is just opposite.

W: Yes, I know. See you then.

Text 6

M: Hey, can I ask you a favor? Could I get a ride to soccer practice? I have to be there at 3 o'clock.

W: I don't think I can. I have a class at 3:15, but I was planning on going to the library after lunch to get some studying done. I won't have any other time to prepare for my test tomorrow morning because I'm working from 5 o'clock until midnight tonight.

Text 7

W: Tom, will you eat your food properly? You're just moving those peas around your plate.

M: I don't like peas. Why do you always make them for me? You know I don't like them.

W: You don't like any vegetables. But you've got to eat some.

M: Why?

W: You know why. Now hurry up and eat.

M: Can I have some ice cream?

W: No. Not until you finish those peas.

Text 8

M: What are you making?

W: I'm working on a blueprint(蓝图) for a new addition to my house.

M: Cool, a new addition! What are you thinking about adding?

W: I want a bigger kitchen, and Don always wants to have a music room of his own. Mostly, we want more space when the baby comes.

M: I didn't know that Don was a musician.

W: Yes, he started with the guitar, but now he can play some different instruments.

M: Wow, a dentist and a musician. I never knew.

W: There's a lot that you don't know about him.

M: Well, I'm glad you all are happy.

W: Well, I have to get going to the grocery store now.

M: Yeah, it was nice to run into you.

W: See you around.

M: See you!

Text 9

M: So how was your adventure vacation?

W: It was wonderful! The beaches were great. And there was a rain forest and a mountain in the center of the island where you could go rock climbing.

M: Wow! Did you go climbing?

W: Well, we went to the bottom of the mountain, spent four hours going to the forest, but then I just felt too tired, so I had to stand at the bottom and watched the others.

M: I don't blame you. So what else did you do?

W: I spent a lot of time on the beach. I tried diving. It was great! Oh, and I saw a dolphin when I was under water.

M: Wow! Did you go bungee jumping (蹦极跳)?

W: I wanted to, but I realized I was scared of heights, so I just gave up. Quite by chance, the engine was broken on the boat, so they had to call the sailing trip off.

M: That's a shame. So what was the most exciting part of the trip?

W: Probably exploring the old caves. I'd never done it before, and I thought it was great.

Text 10

W: It is well-known that “prom”, a formal dance held at the end of high school or college, is an important date in every student’s life. “Prom” means to walk around, beautifully dressed, in order to attract attention. The idea is that you should see and be seen by others.

The “prom” is not just an American tradition though most people believe that it started in America. In Canada, the event is called a “formal”. In Britain and Australia, the old-fashioned word “dance” is more and more often being referred to as a “prom”, and for final school year students in all these countries, this event is the highlight of the school year, just as it is in the USA. Most countries have some forms of celebration when students finish high school. After all, it marks the end of life as a child, and the beginning of life as an adult.

“Prom” is expensive to organize and the tickets can cost the students a lot of money. The tradition is that students themselves have to raise the money to pay for it. In some American schools, student unions save for the event for the four years they spend in high school.
