Cologne, Germany

The chocolate capital of Germany, Cologne is the home of the Stollwerck chocolate company. For the 150th anniversary of the company, museum exhibit was created to celebrate their history. Since then, the exhibit has grown into an entire museum. The Imhoff Stollwerck museum has interactive exhibits, samples and a giant chocolate fountain.

Tain L'Hermitage, France

Tain L'Hermitage is the home of the world-renowned chocolate producer, Valrhona. A great stop is the Valrhona Ecole du Grand Chocolate, a school that teaches professional chefs, chocolatiers and caterers. They even host a three-day course that teaches amateurs how to make desserts.

Hershey, America

Dubbed “the Sweetest Place on Earth”, the town originally called Derry Church was renamed Hershey in 1906 due to the popularity of Hershey chocolates. Chocolate-town has branded itself as an American chocolate center and some popular chocolate attractions include Hershey’s Chocolate World, The Hershey Story Museum and The Chocolate Spa.

Zurich, Switzerland

Switzerland consumes more chocolate per person than any other country, and with world-renowned companies like Cailler-Nestle, Lindt and Sprungli calling it home it’s no wonder. Zurich is the heart of chocolate production in the country. For a truly unique experience, the Swiss Travel System, along with Cailler-Nestle, offers an excursion on “The Swiss Chocolate Train”. The train departs from Montreux and makes a stop in Gruyeres where Gruyere cheese is made before finally arriving in Broc where guests get a tour of the Cailler-Nestle factory.

- D. They are favored by desserts lovers.

B

Wherever on the globe she may be, humanitarian Nyamayaro keeps close to her native Africa by carrying a yellow dress. “It reminds me of the bright, beautiful African sky I used to see in my small village,” she tells People. Nyamayaro’s life path wasn’t always so high-profile. Growing up, she assumed she’d spent her life contributing to her village, and farming in the fields like the other women around her. But a chance encounter with a United Nations worker that came amid a severe drought altered that path forever.

"I will never forget that day," Nyamayaro says. "A child dies from hunger every five seconds, and I almost became one of those children. A severe drought had hit our village when I turned 8 years old and suddenly, my paradise changed overnight and there was nothing to eat or drink. I thought I was going to die. It felt like there was no way of getting out of this. But then this incredible thing happened, an African, who was a United Nations humanitarian, found me, and gave me a bowl of porridge that saved my life." The chance encounter provided more than just life-saving nourishment—it opened the doors as to what could be possible for her, who immediately set her sights on working for the United Nations just like her savior.

"I thought I want to be like her, so that one day I can change the lives of others. I'm so grateful for that moment which was very devastating, because it gave my life so much meaning and purpose. The woman showed me what was possible. Sometimes one moment can really change your entire life."

Just as the United Nations worker opened her eyes to opportunities previously unknown, Nyamayaro hopes girls from Africa can do the same for children growing up in villages just like her, as she knows her story is not unique.

24. Why is a yellow dress mentioned in paragraph 1?

- A. It stands for her bright future.
- B. It highlights her personal preference.
- C. It is related to the scenery of her hometown.
- D. It is the lucky color of her hometown.

25. Why did Nyamayaro want to be a humanitarian?

- A. To get rid of the poverty as soon as possible.
- B. To shoulder the responsibility of helping others.
- C. To seek for chances to broaden her mind.
- D. To set an example for the whole country.

26. What does Nyamayaro's career story tell us?

- A. Fame is a great thirst of the young.

英语试题 第 5 页 (共 12 页)

- B. Success means getting person's desires satisfied.
- C. Ups and downs make one strong.
- D. Where there's a will there's a way.

27. Where is this passage most likely from?

- A. A magazine.
- B. A novel.
- C. A brochure.
- D. A guidebook.

C

As of 2020, the world's biggest lithium-ion (锂离子) battery is hooked up to the Southern California power grid and can provide 250 million watts of power, or enough to power about 250,000 homes. But it's actually not the biggest battery in the world: these lakes are.

Wait – how can a pair of lakes be a battery? To answer that question, it helps to define a battery: it's simply something that stores energy and releases it on demand. The lithium-ion batteries that power our phones, laptops, and cars are just one type. They store energy in lithium ions.

How do the two lakes store and release energy? First, one is 300 meters higher than the other. Electricity power pumps that move billions of liters of water from the lower lake to the higher one. This stores the energy by giving the water extra gravitational potential energy. Then, when there's high demand for electricity, valves (阀门) open, releasing the stored energy by letting water flow downhill to power 6 giant turbines that can generate 3 billion watts of power for 10 hours.

Unfortunately, neither of the giant batteries we've talked about so far is big enough to power multiple cities. The two lakes setup requires specific geography, takes up a lot of land, and has high upfront costs to build. The giant lithium-ion battery in California can power about 250,000 homes, yes, but only for an hour. Lithium-ion batteries also require certain heavy metals to make. These resources are limited, and mining them causes environmental damage. Inventors all over the world are rising to the challenge of making batteries that can meet our needs – many of them even weirder than the two lakes.

28. Why is the world's biggest lithium-ion battery mentioned in Paragraph 1?

- A. To make a comparison.
- B. To introduce the topic.
- C. To stress its importance.
- D. To declare a fact.

29. Which statement is true according to the passage?
- A. With the help of the pumps, the two lakes store energy.
 - B. The water flow by itself to release the stored energy.
 - C. The two lakes setup is able to power multiple cities.
 - D. Lithium-ion batteries are environmentally friendly.
30. What will most probably be talked about in the following paragraph?
- A. Inventors' worries.
 - B. Inventors' efforts.
 - C. Stranger batteries.
 - D. New challenges.
31. Which is the best title for the passage?
- A. Battery Inventors Face New Challenges.
 - B. The World's Biggest Battery Looks Nothing Like a Battery
 - C. Giant Batteries Fail to Meet Our Needs.
 - D. Newly-invented Batteries.

The pandemic has required many people to make difficult judgments. Politicians have had to decide which restrictions to impose on citizens' behavior and individuals were forced to assess how much personal risk to take.

Good judgment is a quality everyone would like to have. But it is remarkably difficult to define precisely, and many people are not sure whether they personally possess it. Sir Andrew Likierman of the London Business School has spent a long time talking to leaders in a wide range of fields in an effort to create a framework for understanding judgment.

First he had to define the word. He suggests that judgment is "the combination of personal qualities with relevant knowledge and experience to form opinions and make decisions". The degree of judgment required tends to increase as people take on more responsibility. For a chief executive, the proportion of decisions involving judgment is high. Deciding not to take action is also a judgment with potentially serious consequences.

Some people think that good judgment is inborn. Sir Andrew accepts that some individuals are born with the ability to listen, be self-aware and better understand other people: all qualities that make good judgment easier. Others may have the wrong sort of characteristics; a tendency to ignore others, stick to rules irrespective of context, rush into action without reflection and struggle to make up their minds.

As artificial intelligence gets used for more and more routine tasks in the service sector, exercising judgment may be one of the only areas where humans retain an edge over machines. This is far from certain, however. With enough practice, machines may be able to display the equivalent of good judgment. But then, perhaps humans can be taught, too. In the long run, one of the trickiest aspects of human judgment may be knowing precisely when to let machines make decisions and when to leave it to people.

32. Which of the following situation DOESN'T need a person's judgment?

- A. Politicians decide restrictions imposed on citizens' behavior.
- B. A person assesses what action to take in face of difficulties.
- C. A student decides not to work out a math problem.
- D. A farmer feels hurt when bitten by a snake.

33. Which statement is true about Sir Andrew Likierman?

- A. He talked to leaders with good judgment for his study.
- B. He thinks people are born with good judgment.
- C. He thinks being self-aware helps with good judgment.
- D. He thinks people with the ability to listen have good judgment.

34. What may artificial intelligence be able to do according to the passage?

- A. to make decisions freely
- B. to finish any tasks
- C. to display good judgment
- D. to leave decisions to humans

35. Which of the following could replace the underlined phrase?

- A. have an advantage over
- B. take the place of
- C. perform worse than
- D. stand up to

第二节 (共 5 小题; 每小题 2.5 分, 满分 12.5 分)

阅读短文, 从短文后的选项选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

A few years ago, I feel like I was stuck in confusion. So I decided to follow in the footsteps of the great American philosopher, Morgan Spurlock, and try something new for 30 days. The idea is actually pretty simple. Think about something you've always wanted to add to your life and try it for the next 30 days. It turns out, 36. _____ ---like watching the news.

There's a few things I learned while doing these 30-day challenges. The first was as I started to do more and harder 30-day challenges, 37. _____. I went from desk-dwelling computer nerd (书呆子) to the kind of guy who bikes to work. Even last year, I ended up hiking up Mt. Kilimanjaro, the highest mountain in Africa. I would never have been that adventurous before I started my 30-day challenges.

38. _____. Have you ever wanted to write a novel? Every November, tens of thousands of people try to write their own 50,000-word novel. It turns out, all you have to do is write 1,667 words a day for a month. So I did. One last thing I'd like to mention is that when I made small, sustainable changes, they were more likely to stick. There's nothing wrong with big, crazy challenges. 39. _____. But people are less likely to stick.

So what are you waiting for? 40. _____, so why not think about something you have always wanted to try and give it a shot for the next 30 days.

- A. In fact, they're a ton of fun.
- B. In fact, I think they're not practical.
- C. I renewed myself while sticking to the challenges.
- D. I persisted with something for the first time in my life.
- E. The next 30 days are going to pass whether you like it or not.
- F. 30 days is just about the right amount of time to add a new habit or get rid of a habit.
- G. I also figured out that if you really want something badly enough, you can do anything for 30 days.

第二节 (满分 25 分)

阅读下面材料, 根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段, 使之构成一篇完整的短文。续写词数应为 150 左右。

One day in 2001, when I was eight years old, my family and I were coming back from a baseball game, which was our usual weekend adventure. But unlike other weekends, a surprise was waiting for us. Two adult wild geese and a small wild goose were wandering around our yard. The adults were frightened by us and flew away, but their baby was still too young to fly and couldn't follow.

It was freezing cold when night fell. Concerned about the wild goose's safety, we begged dad to protect the little guy. Dad took the tiny little thing to the back porch(门廊) to keep warm and protect him from wild animals. The small wild goose seemed in a panic, unaware of what could happen. The next morning, we try to drive the wild goose over to his parents, who kept coming back to our yard. He wouldn't go to them, and they wouldn't come close to take him. We kept this up for six days, but no luck. By then, the young wild goose had clearly decided we were his new family. My sister Anna called the little guy Peeper, because he would follow us around the yard making a peeping noise, nonstop. Every time we called his name, he would respond. We also decided that Peeper was a boy, I don't know why; it just felt right.

Days turned into weeks, and weeks turned into months until almost a year passed. Peeper liked to sleep on our back porch each night, and every day my dad would clean up all the goose droppings(鸟兽的粪便) carefully. Dad would throw Peeper up into the air so he could fly a circle around the house, coming back again once the porch was clean.

注意:

- 1.续写的词数应为 150 左右;
- 2.请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。

Paragraph 1:

One day, my dad threw him up in the air as usual, but this time, Peeper just flew off.

Paragraph 2:

To my amazement, in 2021, an aging adult wild goose came to my home.

Dear friends,

I am Li Hua. I notice some students eat snacks at mealtimes instead of having meals. Now I'd like to call on you to form a healthy eating habits.

For us students, eating healthy food is of great importance because we need enough nutrients to keep our body functioning well. Having meals regularly is a good way to keep fit and prevent diseases. By eating snacks, we may get sick easily.

Let's change our ways of living. Let's have a healthy diet from now on. By having meals regularly, we will grow up healthily and happily.

Yours,

Li Hua

Everyone was very, very sad. We looked for him for days, calling his name, but he didn't come back. We hoped he found a flock and went off on his natural way. Again, days turned into weeks and weeks turned into months, then years. I missed my little buddy, and I would call for him every time I saw a flock of Canadian geese fly by in V-formation. Twenty years passed, and Peeper became a fond memory for my family.

At first, I assumed it was just another wild goose. After two weeks, it became clear to me that this wasn't a random wild goose. He did all of the same things Peeper used to, like trying to come in through the front door. In addition to mimicking Peeper's old ways, this wild goose also responded to the name Peeper. Much to my amazement, my old best friend had returned, 20 years later.

Text 1

M: Do you want to come to the movies with Jeff and me, Donna? We're going to see Spider-Man: Homecoming.

Homecoming.

W: Uh, I don't really want to see that movie. Besides, I'm too tired to go anywhere. Say hi to Jeff, though.

Text 2

M: Is $150 enough for the watch?

W: I'm afraid not. 50 more dollars should be given.

Text 3

M: It's strange being back in school.

W: What do you mean?

M: I think it's tough to get used to studying, meeting new people, and taking notes again after being on vacation for so long.

Text 4

M: Miss, just calm down. Tell me who you're here to see.

W: I have a job interview with Mr. Beringer, but my car broke down on the way, and I was supposed to be here 15 minutes ago!

Text 5

M: Do you mean that both of your parents work?

W: So what? Only 10% of American families have a traditional working father and a stay-at-home mother.

Text 6

M: We've just moved into a new house.

W: Really? Congratulations!

M: Thank you, so we want to buy a new television set.

W: What kind of television set do you want to buy?

M: A color TV set, of course, but I'm not sure about the size. Maybe we should buy a big one. What's your opinion?

W: In my opinion, I don't think it's necessary to buy a very big one.

M: Any reason?

W: Yes. As I know, your sitting room isn't very big. If you put a very big television in the room, it will be bad for your eyes, and a small TV set can still pick up good programs.

M: Mm, that's quite sure. I'll think about it.

Text 7

W: We're planning a trip for right after we graduate, and I'm asking everybody where they would like to go most. Any thoughts?

M: I've always wanted to go somewhere hot like Hawaii. I'd love to just lie on the beach, have a drink...just relax, although I suppose that staying in one place might get boring after a while. How about a trip through Europe?

W: You're not the first person to say that. To be honest, I kind of agree with you. If we were to go to the Bahamas, say, I wouldn't complain. But Europe sounds more attractive.

答案第2页, 总4页

M: Well, as it happens, I spoke with a bunch of our friends last night. All of them began by saying the same thing we did about beaches and stuff. In the end, everyone agreed that they'd rather have a more diverse experience.

W: Well, I think we have our destination. Now we just need to get our plane tickets.

M: Hold your horses (别忙, 耐心点). We need to calculate the cost first.

Text 8

W: Tell me, Peter, What makes Harrods so famous?

M: Well, it's the biggest department store in the UK, and its Food Hall and Egyptian Hall are very famous.

W: What is special about the Food Hall!?

M: It sells many different kinds of food. For example, it has two hundred and fifty kinds of cheese from all over the world.

W: That's amazing. And why is the Egyptian Hall so famous?

M: Well, when people see it, they will feel they are in another world. It looks like an Egyptian Building from 4,000 years ago.

W: Is it true that Harrods produces its own electricity?

M: Yes, it does. Seventy percent, enough for a small town.

W: Really? Tell me, how many customers do you have on an average day?

M: About thirty thousand people come on an average day. But during the January sales, the number increases to three hundred thousand customers a day.

Text 9

M: Hi, Jenny. Is it true you are moving to London?

W: Yes, it is.

M: What made you decide to do that?

W: Work, mainly. I'm sure I'll be able to find a job there.

M: You are probably right. But where are you going to live?

W: I hope I will find a flat to share with somebody. That will be cheaper.

M: Yes, that's a good idea. Are you taking your dog with you?

W: No, I don't think so. My parents have offered to take care of him. And I don't think he would be happy in the city.

答案第3页, 总4页

M: You are probably right. But aren't you afraid of moving to such a big place, especially after living in a small village?

W: Not really. I think I'll enjoy myself. There's so much to do there. I expect I won't miss the countryside much and I can always come back and visit.

M: Well, I just hope you'll invite me to stay when you get settled.

W: Of course I will.

Text 10

M: Our home here is fairly large. We have four bedrooms, an office, two bathrooms, a front room and a dining room. We do a lot of things around the house. We garden quite a bit, walk in our garden, and play basketball on the basketball court. Usually on Saturday afternoon, we have a barbecue and that's our meal because during the summer it gets pretty hot here and sometimes you just want to be outside rather than be inside. In California you really have two seasons from our entertainment point of view—spring, summer and fall are all very much the same type of activities and then winter is very different on the activities that we do on the weekend. Summertime activities are usually involved around the children's sports. My youngest son often plays baseball in summer.
