

听力: 1-5 CCAAB 6-10 CACBB 11-15 BACBB 16-20 AACCB

阅读: A篇: 21-23 ABB B篇: 24-27 DCCB

C篇: 28-31 CACD D篇: 32-35 ABDD 七选五 BCGDF

完型: 41-45 BCABD 46-50 ACDBC 51-55 ABDAC

语法填空: 56. hidden 57. have been discovered 58. what

59. harmonious 60. dating 61. a 62. while 63. impossible 64. out
65. wisdom

第四部分 写作——应用文

I was so sorry to hear that your performance at the school music festival didn't get the recognition it deserved due to your nervousness.

(给予安慰)

Given all the hard work you put into preparing for the competition, it must have been very disappointing (表达同情). However, this setback should never discourage you. In order to move forward, you'd better keep practicing and perfecting your skills. Besides, asking for feedback from your teachers and peers can provide valuable insights and suggestions for improvement. (鼓励+建议)

I'm convinced that you will work even harder since every experience is a chance to learn and grow. Looking forward to your success in the future. (鼓励+期望)

第四部分 写作——读后续写

Then it was Ed's turn to launch his rocket. Immediately Ed lifted his rocket and headed to the launch area with full confidence. Without thinking, words flowed from Tom's mouth out of expectation so that it almost surprised him to hear them. "Ed, hold up!" he yelled anxiously. Ed stopped and asked, with confusion written on his face. "What is it?" Tom rushed to him and pointed at his rocket. "It's your fin. It's loose." Alarmed, Ed looked down and tested the fin. Like a broken wing, it bent. He held it up to the announcer, who gave him five minutes to fix it. Ed hugged Tom tightly, thanking him a thousand times.

A few minutes later Ed's rocket straightly shot up to sky with full strength. The rocket roared to life. Spitting smoke, it leaped from the pad, slicing the air effortlessly. It climbed wonderfully, achieving a final result of eleven hundred fifty feet, a record that no one else had reached. Tom lost. He walked alone with head lowering not sure of where he was going. At that time, voices from other kids rushed to him "Could you help us with our rockets" "Why not go to Tom's house?" At that moment his mind was at ease, and the competition seemed very far away.