书面表达（25分）

Dear Mr. Smith,

In honor of the 70th anniversary of the foundation of New China, our school is going to organize a chorus competition. As a student of yours, I'd like to invite you to join us in the celebrations.

With the purpose of promoting students' patriotism, on the night of Sept. 29th, there is going to be a chorus competition among all the classes from Grades One and Two, singing songs for our great beloved motherland, and singing high praise of the great changes having taken place in China since the reform and opening-up policy's being carried out. It will start at 19: 00 in the musical hall.

By the way, all the students are told not to bring any snacks or water to the competition site. I sincerely hope that you will join us and share the happiness with us. Looking forward to your early reply!

Yours,
Li Hua

Text 1

M: I usually do some reading instead of going shopping on Sundays.

W: But I enjoy going swimming.

Text 2

M: Do you think we have made enough food for the party?

W: The refrigerator is about to explode.

Text 3

M: Have you got a single room for two nights?

W: Yes. You can have a room facing the sea.

M: What's the price?

W: $34 a night with a shower.

Text 4

W: Excuse me, Professor Davidson, but I was hoping to talk to you about my class project for physics.

M: I have a class in a few minutes. Why don't you come and see me during office hours tomorrow?

Text 5

M: According to the report, about 90 percent of the students did quite well in history, but only 70 percent in literature.

W: Well, I still think that history is a little more complicated than literature.

Text 6

M: I've counted this money three times, but I can't get the right amount.

W: Well, what did you start with, Fred? $120?

M: Yes. We have two fifties, a ten, and two fives.

W: OK, and you sold a key chain — that's five dollars...and two notebooks — that's another two dollars, right?

M: Yes, that's right. But no matter what I do, I always have an extra dollar.

W: Well, we can't close the store until the numbers are right. Let me have a look.

M: Be my guest, Stephanie.

Text 7

W: Now, Keiko, how long did you live in America for?

M: I lived there from 2011 to 2016.

W: That's a long time. What was it like when you came back to Japan?

M: It was quite difficult because I looked like Japanese and obviously I am Japanese but I acted a little bit different from other people. For example, there's no hug between friends. Those little things in daily life shocked me a little bit.

W: Have you got used to that culture now?

M: Yes. I think it's one of the good things about Japanese cultures and Japanese people because they really do respect the other people's opinions, even with friends. They don't take each other for granted so I'm getting used to it.

Text 8

W: Hello. My name is Christina. I'm just stopping by to bring you some cookies and to introduce myself.

M: Hi, Christina. I'm Bryce. It's very nice to meet you. Please come in.

W: Sure.

M: Thank you for the cookies. Would you like something to drink?

W: Water is fine. Thank you.

M: Here you go. Take a seat. So, where were you living before?

W: My husband and I were living in Nebraska, but he got a job out here, so that's why we moved. I've never been to the West Coast before. I love Washington so far.

M: I've been in Washington for ten years now. I was born in Texas and came out here for college. I've stayed ever since.

W: What do you do for work?

M: I'm a computer programmer. It's a good job, but my real passion in life is making furniture.

W: That's interesting. I do a lot of painting in my spare time, although I'm a banker during the day.

Text 9

W: What are you wearing?

M: A Fitbit. It's a watch that helps me keep track of my health.

W: How accurate do you think it actually is?

M: I'm not sure. I read a study recently that said the Fitbit's heart rate monitor doesn't do a great job at measuring your heartbeat during physical activity. It gives a higher reading than it should.

W: Oh, I thought it would have been the other way around.

M: Me too. Of course, Fitbit was very upset by the study and said it wasn't true.

W: Well, a study like that will probably really hurt its business.

M: Well, their products are very popular, so people will still most likely buy them.

W: Do you wear your Fitbit often, or just when you're exercising?

M: I wear it all day, every day. I even wear it when I'm sleeping.

W: Wow, that's impressive. Isn't it uncomfortable?

M: No, not at all.

W: Maybe I should get one.

M: You should. I really like mine. There are many different kinds you can choose from. They're expensive, but I think they're worth the money.

Text 10

Have you heard of the Golden Rule? The great Chinese philosopher Confucius taught this principle. It is a very important and well-known idea. The rule says not to do anything to other people that you would not want them to do to you. It is a very simple yet deep truth. Confucius possessed a lot of important wisdom like this.

He encouraged many values like children respecting elders, people respecting their ancestors, and wives respecting husbands. He desired for these moral principles in people's lives and in the government of the country. He believed that people should develop their own personal rules instead of simply memorizing rules of behavior to follow. He also had a thoughtful way of teaching. Instead of presenting his ideas through arguments and reasoning, he taught his rules through personal examples. He himself studied hard and sought truth, dreams and a perfect personality. In short, Confucius aimed to establish a world of great harmony. For over two thousand years, his teachings and beliefs still have a great effect on Chinese culture. Many other cultures around the world have also been influenced to this day by these important moral teachings.
