第四部分 第一节 (满分 15 分) One possible version:

Club Activity Recommendation

It's a pleasure to share my recommendation--the reading club activities which I have been participating in for two years. As a proud and active member, not only can I appreciate literary works during the weekly gathering, but I can also share insightful ideas and make like-minded friends. Besides, I also benefit tremendously: from the rewarding life lessons I learn to the upgraded reading skills now I have. Whenever I am going through a tough time, it is the mental support gained from the club activities that leads me out of the dark. That's why it comes first on my list of recommendation.

When it comes to the suggestion of the club activities in your school, I strongly recommend giving students more free choices in selecting and exchanging their own favorite books. By doing so, young readers can greatly extend their knowledge of life and benefit from each other.

第二节 (满分 25 分) One possible version:

"Jason, that was quite some language. You surprised us," Mrs. Ehlers looked at me. I told Mrs. Ehlers frankly that I had been unwilling to say it. Mrs. Ehlers patted me on the shoulder consolingly, suggesting that I should have told the director to change it. I nodded my head, but still doubted whether the director would let me. Mrs. Ehlers seemed to have read my mind and said with a soft smile, "Whatever you get is a gain. We have to stand up and give it a try sometimes, don't we?"

I said goodbye to the couple and waited in the drama room until our director appeared. With my heart racing, I stood near her desk and casually asked if I might possibly change the disrespectful line in the play to a more decent one. She sank into silence for a moment and replied, "Your replacement is indeed more appropriate. Thank you!" Agreeably surprised by her response, I left with a mixture of gratitude, humility, respect and shame. From that moment on, I felt increasingly confident and proud to share my views with others.
