Artworks Wanted

To provide a platform for students to express creativity and showcase artistic talents, our school is preparing to host an art exhibition with the theme of "the Beauty of Culture". We need your contributions!

The exhibition will be held next Wednesday in our school's auditorium. We welcome and appreciate varieties of artwork types, including paintings, drawings, sculptures, carvings, calligraphy works, photography works or any other art forms. But the artworks must be suitable for public display and not contain any offensive or inappropriate content. Please ensure that your artwork is delivered to the Student Union office by July 3rd. In your submission, please include a brief description of your artwork, your full name and contact information.

We look forward to seeing your incredible artworks!

But he was nowhere in sight. Marge hurried to the bushes, calling out the cat's name and meanwhile, I walked around the yard and checked the other possible hiding spots, like under the porch and behind the shed, but he was nowhere to be found. As time ticked by, there was still no sign of Mr. Naughty. Our worry and anxiety started to escalate, and we decided to expand the search range to the nearby surroundings, but still no luck. Finally, we dragged our tired bodies back to the yard with heavy hearts.

Suddenly a faint sound reached our ears from the water pipe on the house wall. It must be Mr. Naughty! Marge and I exchanged glances and immediately rushed towards the sound. We bent down and found Mr. Naughty hiding in the water pipe, his glass bead-like eyes shining in the darkness of the pipe. After failing to grasp him or call him to come out, Marge had a sudden inspiration of using his favorite toy to lure him out. It took some time, but eventually, Mr. Naughty came out of the pipe. We were all relieved and happy to see that he was safe and unharmed. Marge and I never told Susan about Mr. Naughty's great escape. And, as far as we know, neither did Mr. Naughty.
