第一节（满分 15 分）

A recent survey shows that most students are barely involved in doing housework at home. Here, I'm writing to convey my opinions about this phenomenon.

From my perspective, being busy with study largely accounts for students' absence from housework. Meanwhile, it's some parents' indulgence that worsens their children's indifference to housework. However, doing housework can equip us with necessary living skills. Besides, housework can be regarded as physical exercise, strengthening our physical qualities. What matters most is that having grown up, we have the obligation to share our parents' burdens.

In conclusion, doing housework should be attached more importance to.

第二节（满分 25 分）

Imagine my surprise when I heard laughter from Hector's room. I entered and found Dylan sitting on the edge of Hector's bed wiping pieces of frozen drink from Hector's mouth. Both boys were giggling and Hector was apparently enjoying the company. I spent the rest of the day speaking to doctors and watching my son playing with the special little boy. It was truly amazing to watch them interact, as if it were the most natural thing in the world. Perhaps to the two of them it was.

On the way home that night, Dylan asked me several times whether Hector would be okay. I told him this boy would get well but he had a hard road ahead of him. My son seemed to be lost in thought for a while. Then he declared his decision to join Healing the Children as a volunteer to help Hector and other children. I never thought that a moody teenager would take up the voluntary work and never again complain about his mother's crazy work schedule.
