参考作文:

Dear fellow students,

I am Li Hua from XinHua Middle School. Our city will hold an speech competition themed "Chinese Youth of the New ERA". So, today I am honored to be here to share my views with you on behalf of our school.

To begin with, as a Chinese youth of the new era, we are supposed to have specific dreams. Not only can they drive us study hard, but also they can help us live a better life with a good command of knowledge. Moreover, it is a strong sense of responsibility that we should have. If we possess responsibility, we may advance bravely when we encounter difficulties in the future. Finally, we have to train ourselves to be more confident, which is the key to success.

Thank you very much for your attention.

Yours,
Li Hua

(Text 1)

W: I'm more of a flyer than a car person.

M: I'm the opposite. I enjoy the journey more in a car or a train. I get a real sense that I'm traveling. I just don't get the same feeling on a plane.

(Text 2)

W: How was your camping trip on the coast?

M: It was a disaster. The weather was awful, our tents started leaking, and we got wet by the rain.

(Text 3)

W: What appeals to me about New York are the wide variety of exhibitions.

M: People from different cultural backgrounds make it an exciting place to be. The best thing for me are the opportunities to try cuisine from all over the world.

(Text 4)

W: Have you read The Call of the Wild by Jack London?

M: Yes, I'm a big fan of Jack London. I've read all his novels and I think this is his best one.

(Text 5)

W: We just spent a week skiing in the mountains and it was fantastic. Aren't you planning to take a vacation soon?

M: I have to wait until I return from my business trip at the end of July. Then I'll rent a house overlooking a beautiful lake for the first week of August.

(Text 6)

M: So how many kids from your class are going on this trip?

W: Practically everyone's going. Dad! We'll go on a guided tour of the city, including the Eiffel Tower and a boat trip on the Seine. We're back in London by Sunday afternoon.

M: Oh, I have no doubt the activities will be worthwhile. Paris is a lovely city and it's not the expense that's bothering me either. I just want to make sure you won't be spending all day wandering about on your own.

W: You're kidding! Every minute of our time is going to be arranged!

(Text 7)

W: Have you taken a tour since you've been here?

M: Yes, I went on a walking tour yesterday. The guide introduced many of Buenos Aires' famous sites. He gave us some interesting information and told a lot of jokes.

W: Where did you go?

M: First, we stopped at the Recoleta Cemetery, where many of Argentina's famous people are buried. Next, we made a stop at the Latin American Art Museum. We saw many excellent examples of Latin American art. We didn't have time to visit the museum gift shop, but we visited an open-air market, where I found many locally-made items.

(Text 8)

W: For many road-trippers, the ultimate dream is to drive across the USA. Jack, how long does the journey usually take?

M: Depending on which route you go on, a road trip across the USA will take between four and six days, assuming you're willing to drive about eight hours a day. I drove at a leisurely pace only about five hours behind the wheel, and spent a bit more time at stops.

W: Which route did you choose?

M: I didn't have enough time and I love warmth and sunshine, so I followed the southern route. The northern and central routes would take longer.

W: Could you please tell us more about your journey?

M: I began in Georgia and finished in California, passing through eight states. I relaxed on the wide, peaceful beaches and visited some of the historic towns. The highlight of my trip, though, was a river tour to explore the Mississippi.

(Text 9)

M: Hello. My family and I are staying here in Trebireh for a week. Can you tell me something about trains to London? I'll need to go there on business for one day.

W: There are regular trains to London at Central Station. They leave every half hour on weekdays and every hour at weekends. It takes about two hours.

M: Ah, right. Are there any discounted tickets?

W: Sure. A popular one is called Super save and this is OK for travel after 8:45. Then there is the Special ticket. You can use it after 10:15. The cheapest one is called Advance and only a certain number are available.

M: Thanks. We're also hoping to do a few trips.

W: We offer direct services to Bristol, where you can spend a great day out with children in the zoo. It is set in the parkland that used to surround the old castle. Alternatively, you can be in Birmingham. There's a new climbing wall built on the site of the old aquarium. We will also be running a special service to Newport where the new science museum opens next year.

M: Thanks a million.

(Text 10)

Hi everyone, I'm Pete. You're all planning to go on your very first cycling trip across Europe. I've been there, and I'd like to share my experiences and give you some tips for making the most of such a trip. The most important thing is preparation. Read as much as you can about everywhere you're going. A bike tour is full of ups and downs; you have to deal with being bored—which was the worst for me, being tired, and not having any personal space. But you have to think about why you're doing the trip. Having a goal can keep you motivated. My motivation was raising money for a small, unknown charity, which protects wildlife habitats. What I had to do during the trip was observe climate change and write about my findings on a blog that I updated every evening. I also sent back photos and videos, which meant I developed certain skills in media and communication—not to mention photography! That will benefit me in the future because I'm hoping to develop my career as a journalist.
