Seeing flowers bloom(开花) in Japan is one of the most adored activities for tourists. Ashikaga Flower Park is one such experience that has been made famous thanks to its flower displays.

When to Visit Ashikaga Flower Park

The best time to visit flower parks depends on when the flowers and trees are in bloom. Ashikaga has many different flower seasons, making it a great destination year-round. Popular flower seasons are:

- April: Spring flowers like Tulips
- May: Blooming Wisteria(紫藤)
- June: Blue and White Hydrangeas
- October: Fields of Lavender

The Great Wisteria Festival

In truth the wisteria season is by far the most popular. Wisteria is known as fuji in Japan, and Ashikaga is possibly the best place in Japan to see fuji flowers. The most impressive attractions during the wisteria season named the “Great Wisteria Festival” are an 80-metre-long tunnel covered in white fuji flowers and a second tunnel covered in yellow laburnum flowers.

Ashikaga Flower Fantasy Winter Illuminations(灯饰)

The lights at the flower park are one of the country’s most celebrated. During the colder months hundreds of thousands of multi-coloured lights are set up around the park. From lining garden beds and walkways to chains of lights hanging like fuji along a tunnel, you’re surrounded by light once night falls.

Tips for Visitors to Ashikaga Flower Park

- Most of the year, the opening hours of the park are from 9:00 to 18:00. During winter hours are reduced to 10:00 to 17:00 and during the Great Wisteria Festival they’re extended to 7:00 to 21:00.
- The entry fees to the park vary during the year, which can even differ from one week to the next and range from 300 to 1800 yen depending on season.

21. Which is the most popular flower season to visit Ashikaga Flower Park?

- A. April. B. May. C. June. D. October.

22. What can we know from the text?

- A. Tourists are likely to explore two tunnels covered in white fuji.
B. Tourists can feast their eyes on numerous colored lights in winter.
C. Tourists will be charged the same for admission the whole year.
D. Tourists can’t be admitted into the park at 19:00 during the wisteria season.

23. What is the purpose of the text?

- A. To display diverse flowers. B. To provide tourist activities.
C. To describe splendid scenery. D. To introduce a travel destination.

Austrian-American actress Hedy Lamarr was the type of woman people love to comment. She was strikingly beautiful, with green eyes, black hair and full lips, which attracted the attention of Hollywood producers in the 1930s and 1940s. However, as Lamarr once said, “The brains of people are more interesting than the looks.” This rang true with her. She was one of the most prolific inventors of the 20th century, who yielded various inventions in her life. Despite the fame as a distinguished actress, Lamarr died with little money to her name, although she invented the technology that powers so much of our world today.

Lamarr was born into a well-to-do family. Her father, a bank director and curious man, inspired her to look at the world with open eyes. He would discuss with her the inner-workings of different machines. These conversations guided Lamarr’s thinking. Meanwhile, Lamarr’s mother introduced her to the arts, placing her in both ballet and piano lessons.

Lamarr’s beauty took center stage in Hollywood at age 16. Later, Lamarr was introduced to businessman and pilot Howard Hughes, who helped to fuel the innovator in Lamarr, giving her a small set of equipment to use in her trailer(活动房屋) on set. While she had an inventing table in her house, the small set allowed Lamarr to work on inventions between takes. She was indeed a genius. “Improving things comes naturally to me,” she once said. Her mind was full of possibilities. She created an upgraded stoplight and a tablet that made a soda similar to Coca-Cola, and proposed the concept of spread spectrum(扩频) technology that makes Wi-Fi today possible.

The moment finally came. The Electronic Frontier Foundation awarded Lamarr with Pioneer Award in 1997. She also became the first woman to receive the Invention Convention's Bulbie Gnass Spirit of Achievement Award. Although she died in 2000, Lamarr was listed into the National Inventors Hall of Fame in 2014. Such achievement has led Lamarr to be named the mother of Wi-Fi and other wireless communications like GPS and Bluetooth.

24. What does the underlined word "prolific" in Paragraph 1 probably mean?

- A. Productive. B. Responsible. C. Optimistic. D. Beautiful.

25. What can we infer from the passage?

- A. Lamarr valued her appearance highly.
B. Lamarr's family impacted little on her.
C. Lamarr partnered Hughes to invent many things.
D. Lamarr's inventions gained official recognition after decades.

26. Which of the following best describes Lamarr?

- A. Curious and outgoing. B. Generous and talented.
C. Creative and devoted. D. Knowledgeable and friendly.

27. What is the best title for the text?

- A. A Soul with Legendary Artistic Life B. An Actress Blessed with Striking Beauty
C. An Inventor Active on the Silver Screen D. A Celebrity Awarded with Top Honors

Agriculture is one of the main drivers of Indonesia's economy, employing more than 50 million people. But many farmers still identify as some of the poorest people in the country. All of that is changing with the help of advanced technology.

Wim Prihanto is the co-founder of the mobile application and website called RegoPantes. The app aims to change the lives to farmers working to make a good living. It works by removing middlemen(中间商) between farmers and the harvest they supply to markets. Farmers usually complain their harvest is always sold below cost when they go through several middlemen. But today, farmers have more power and all with the tap of a finger. "For popular commodities(商品), farmers usually have to go through 8 to 13 middlemen. Along the way the price decreases and income reduces for them. With this app, farmers can immediately post their produce and sell it to consumers," Prihanto says.

The app has also helped farmers to understand the market much better. They can learn how the market operates, what exactly customers are looking for, evaluate other prices in the market and understand what they can do to get better prices.

RegoPantes is not the only app that allows farmers to sell directly to customers. Many e-commerce websites in Indonesia have also enabled farmers to sell their produce to customers across provinces. Although they're only able to sell in small volumes(量) for now, the price remains affordable and increasingly competitive. Through the e-commerce platforms, farmers in Central and East Java, for example, can serve customers in Jakarta's markets.

There is a huge potential for smart agriculture in Indonesia but it comes with challenges. Only less than 5 percent of farmers in the country are below 35 years old, many of whom still do not own a smartphone. Besides, in some smaller areas, there is no Internet, so it is difficult to be a part of digital farming. But those challenges can be overcome as smart agriculture can be beneficial to economy in the long run. It is already beginning to increase the productivity of agricultural companies and smallholder farmers.

28. What is RegoPantes designed for?

- A. Bringing farmers more interests. B. Making commodities more popular.
C. Managing the market better. D. Increasing the farmers' harvest.

29. What can we learn from the text?

- A. The more middlemen, the higher farmers' incomes.
B. Much more information is accessible to farmers with RegoPantes.
C. RegoPantes is the most useful app that benefits Indonesian farmers.
D. Farmers can develop customers worldwide through e-commerce websites.

30. Which should come first to promote Indonesia's smart agriculture?

- A. To build more e-commerce platforms. B. To popularize the use of smartphones and Internet.
C. To adjust the prices of e-commerce apps. D. To strengthen Internet security in smaller areas.

31. How does the author think of the future of Indonesia's smart agriculture?

- A. Promising. B. Uncertain. C. Smooth. D. Worrying.

第二节（共5小题；每小题2.5分，满分12.5分）

根据下面短文，从短文后的选项中选出可以填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Why Experiencing a New Culture Is Good for You

Often the best way to really explore a new place and culture is by spending abundant time there. A quick vacation may give you a glimpse(瞥) into your destination. 32. These opportunities provide a support network as you adjust to new surroundings.

Dealing with culture shock

Culture shock is a response to your new surroundings when abroad that can leave you confused, anxious and feeling lonely. It generally includes frustration at how even the simplest things can be different in the new culture. The thing is though, culture shock can be seen as a problem but also as an opportunity. 33.

34

Perhaps the most obvious lesson learned with travel is the importance of language. Even just learning the basics of the local language can make getting about and making new friends easier. Trying to overcome the language barrier also teaches you about non-verbal communication. Since you can't rely on what is being said, you learn to adapt, to people's tone and body language. This makes you a better communicator.

Finding inspiration

35. In each of these creative fields you may come across new approaches or elements that you bring home with you; maybe it's a certain combination of ingredients that you add to your cooking or a new style you adopt for your own home's design.

Meeting new people

Meeting people and making friends while overseas is both a necessity and one of the most enjoyable aspects of the experience. 36, which enables you to meet people that you never would have known otherwise. You may be exposed to people from different walks of life, find a similar spirit, or both at the same time.

- A. Learning language skills
- B. Developing body language
- C. So you're less likely to further experience a new culture
- D. Travelling to new cultures is a great way to expand your social circle
- E. Experiencing the local culture can expose you to local art, cuisine, architecture, etc.
- F. Only by adjusting to and accepting new surroundings can you understand and appreciate it
- G. But experiences like student or work exchange programs allow you to immerse(沉浸) in a new culture

第三节 (满分 20 分)

阅读下面材料，根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段，使之构成一篇完整的短文。

David Ballesteros looked at the lawyer. He couldn't believe his ears.

The lawyer told him that his father left the 1923 Singer sewing machine(缝纫机) to him. It once belonged to his great grandmother and his father considered it his greatest treasure. "That's very nice," David said. "But what else? What about the legacy(遗产)? The money? What does it all amount to?"

The lawyer, Mr. Jarvin, put down the will(遗嘱). He felt sorry for David but he thought David's father had explained the terms of the will before he died. David remembered that his father just told him he'd be passing on his riches, but he never specified(明确) the amount—that was what he was trying to find out!

Mr. Jarvin said carefully, "David, no money at all." "That's impossible!" David screamed. His father owned clothing factories all over the United States. He was rich! Mr. Jarvin explained that all the money was donated to charity under the terms of his father's will.

David was in shock. He'd lived a life of wealth and now he was left with nothing but an old sewing machine! Mr. Jarvin said to David that his father left him a letter which might explain his decision. David grabbed the envelope. His father's decision was to leave him a poor man! What kind of explanation could he possibly have for that! He drove back to his apartment just in time to see a truck pull up.

"Mr. David Ballesteros?" asked the man from the truck. "Yes," David said. "We have a delivery for you, sir." He gestured to the old sewing machine. "Where would you like it?" David was about to scream "In the garbage!" but it occurred to him that the old item might be worth some money, so he ordered the man to take it up to his apartment. After the man left, David poured himself a drink and looked at the sewing machine. "I have an MBA. I'm prepared to run companies. What am I supposed to do with a sewing machine, Dad?" he asked aloud.

注意：

1. 续写词数应为150左右；
2. 请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。

Suddenly Mr. Jarvin's words reminded him that the letter might tell something. _____

Putting down the letter, David understood his father's good intentions with tears flooding. _____
