Local authorities and firefighters in the United States are always on the lookout for new and creative methods to help control wildfires. Especially during the hot and dry summer months, thousands of wildfires cause damage to forests every year. The city of West Sacramento in North California has found a creative secret weapon to help deal with this phenomenon: goats.

These friendly animals have been assisting the city with wildfire prevention and fire risks by eating weeds, dry grass and dead trees. When the goats eat the things that are likely to catch fire, they prevent the problem from happening.

Wildfires occur naturally when dry plants are ignited(点燃) by the sun's heat and catch on fire. However, most wildfires are caused by human carelessness, including unattended campfires, cigarettes and other flammable objects. The best strategy to battle the fires and minimize the damage is to attempt to remove the fuel that enables the spread of the flames, in this case the dry weeds, trees and plants. If the things that are most likely to catch fire are gone, the fire is less likely to spread.

The lovable goats are able to reach difficult areas that people are not able to access. About 400 of these goats can clear two acres per day. They even fertilize(使肥沃) the area, a natural and free side effect of eating all those dry plants. Firefighters and government officials cannot be happier with the results.

"For us, the combination of turning to goats for help with the quick fire response is an effective method of keeping our neighbors safe from disastrous wildfires," said assistant Fire Chief Khari Helae. "With climate change and the fact that our vegetation is being affected because of climate change, it's necessary to focus on our fuel reduction program."

24. How do goats assist the city in dealing with wildfires?
- A. By identifying the fuel in forests.
B. By consuming dry plants.
C. By leading firefighters to fire sources.
D. By eating up green tree leaves.
25. What can we say about the new method?
- A. It is complex but rewarding.
B. It causes damage to local land.
C. It is well accepted worldwide.
D. It is environmentally friendly.
26. What can be learned from Khari Helae's words?
- A. He spoke highly of the new method.
B. He was dissatisfied with fire responses.
C. He was optimistic about climate change.
D. He considered fuel reduction impractical.
27. Which of the following is the best title for the text?
- A. Goats Help Keep Wildfires Under Control
B. Firefighters Are Being Gradually Replaced
C. Disastrous Wildfires Need to Be Controlled
D. Animals Are Fighting Against Climate Change

Last night, my husband and I just celebrated our wedding anniversary. Recalling the fun we had on our wedding day as well as some of the funny accidents was a great way to get us close to each other and amp up the romance of the night.

Still, I could imagine my friends rolling their eyes at that idea. Engaging in nostalgia (怀旧) seemed embarrassing for them and they even worried it could make me regretful. After all, when you look back on the early days of your romance, you might feel bittersweet after realizing how much has changed.

But recent research suggests that feeling nostalgic about significant past events from your relationship can actually benefit it—whether you recall those alone or with your partner.

In one study, some participants in a romantic relationship were prompted to write about a nostalgic experience they'd had with their partner or to listen to a song that made them feel nostalgic about their relationship, while others wrote about an ordinary experience they'd had or a song they liked. Afterwards, those participants told the researchers how close and committed they felt to their partner, how satisfied they were with their relationship, and how much passionate love they felt for their partner.

After comparing the groups, the researchers found that those experiencing nostalgia felt closer, more committed and more loving toward their partner, and were more satisfied with their overall relationship. This was true even when accounting for other emotions, like happiness, which might affect our views of others.

"Our conclusion is that experiencing nostalgia temporarily enhances perceptions of romantic relationship quality," says lead researcher Nicholas Evans of the University of Manitoba in Canada.

While past studies have found that feeling nostalgic brings meaning to one's life and helps people feel more socially connected, the use of nostalgia in romantic relationships, specifically, had not been tested before. Evans believes this is an untapped resource for couples.

"Now, we have proved that nostalgia definitely could be one of many tools to help enhance romantic relationships," he says.

28. What does the underlined phrase "amp up" in the first paragraph mean?

- A. Assess.
B. Recall.
C. Increase.
D. Ruin.

29. What is the author's friends' opinion on nostalgia?

- A. Engaging in it is beneficial.
B. It hardly affects relationships.
C. Experiencing it is very natural.
D. It may lead to unpleasant results.

30. What were all the participants in the study asked to do?
- A. Sing with their partners.
B. Comment on each other.
C. Listen to nostalgic songs.
D. Report their feelings.
31. What can we learn about the study?
- A. It still needs to be improved.
B. It is of pioneering significance.
C. Its result confirms couples' belief.
D. Its conclusion has been tested before.

D

According to a new study by researchers at the University of Hawaii, the average land location on Earth will experience about 5% more rainbows by the end of the 21st century. Like other major changes in store for those living into the next century, the rate of rainbows will grow due to climate change.

"By 2100, climate change is likely to generate a 4.0%~4.9% increase in global annual rainbow days," the researchers write. "Around 21%~31% of land areas will lose rainbow days and 66%~79% will gain rainbow days, with rainbow gain hotspots mainly in high latitude (高纬度的) and high elevation regions with smaller human populations."

To estimate if rainbows might increase or decrease in a world affected by climate change, the research team decided to create a first ever global map of their occurrences. For this, they turned to an unlikely assistant, Flickr. The online photo sharing platform offers a deep well of data on rainbows, with millions of users uploading images of the atmospheric phenomenon from around the world. Of course, just typing in "rainbow" presented its own problem.

"We had to sort through photos of rainbow artwork, rainbow flags and rainbow foods to find the real rainbows," co-author Amanda Wong said in a press release.

Once they had a vast image collection of rainbows generated by the refraction (折射) of light by rain droplets, the research team built a model based on the rainbow photo locations and global maps of precipitation (降水), cloud cover and sun angle. The model was then applied to present future rainbow occurrences over global land masses.

Not surprisingly, islands remain the dominant hotspots for rainbow activity. By 2100, the model predicts rainbow gains for northern latitudes and high elevations where climate change is expected to bring warmer temperatures, less snow and more rain. Regions where the model shows a drop in precipitation are expected to lose rainbow days.

While the team predicts that the average human will have more opportunities to witness a rainbow by 2100, they admit that it is not a delightful thing as it means we human beings are increasingly affected by climate change and that we should take immediate action in response to that.

32. What is the problem of typing in "rainbow" on Flickr?
- A. The data of rainbows are very limited.
B. Photos of real rainbows are rarely seen.
C. The photo sharing platform breaks down.
D. Images of unreal rainbows appear as well.
33. Why did the researchers build a model?
- A. To monitor global land masses closely.
B. To predict future rainbow occurrences.
C. To demonstrate global climate change.
D. To collect more latest rainbow images.
34. What is the team's emotion conveyed in the last paragraph?
- A. Concern.
B. Delight.
C. Positivity.
D. Indifference.
35. What is the main idea of the text?
- A. Global warming will threaten tourism.
B. A loss of rainbow days is unavoidable.
C. Climate change boosts global rainbows.
D. Islands are hotspots for rainbow activity.

第二节 (共5小题;每小题2分,满分10分)

根据短文内容,从短文后的选项选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Unhealthy Coping(应对) Strategies for Uncomfortable Emotions to Avoid

Whether you're blamed by your parents or you've had a rough day at the office, you may be bothered by uncomfortable emotions. Having healthy coping strategies can be key to getting through tough times. However, sometimes a strategy helps you endure emotional pain, but it doesn't mean it's healthy. 36 Here are some unhealthy coping strategies you should avoid:

Drinking alcohol or using drugs: Alcohol and drugs may temporarily ease your pain, but they won't resolve your issues. They are likely to introduce new problems into your life. 37 Using those substances to cope also puts you at risk for developing a substance use disorder and it may create health, legal and financial problems, and social problems.

Venting(发泄) emotions constantly to others: It can be healthy to talk about how bad your situation is or how terrible you feel so that you can gain support, develop a solution, or see a problem in a different way. But studies show it doesn't always help to solve your problem. 38

Overspending: While many people say they enjoy shopping as a way to feel better, it can become unhealthy. 39 Also, spending more than you can afford will only backfire in the end and cause more stress.

Avoiding: 40 For example, if you're stressed about your financial situation, you might spend time with friends or watch TV. But if you never resolve your financial issues, your coping strategies are only masking the problem.

- A. You should avoid using those strategies.
- B. Owning too many possessions can add stress to your life.
- C. Some coping strategies could create bigger trouble in your life.
- D. Turn to your loved ones to remove your uncomfortable emotions.
- E. Repeatedly talking to people about that may get you stuck in pain.
- F. Alcohol, for example, is a depressant that can make you feel worse later.
- G. Healthy coping strategies can become unhealthy if you use them to avoid the problem.

第三部分 语言知识运用(共两节,满分45分)

第一节 (共20小题;每小题1.5分,满分30分)

阅读下面短文,从短文后各题所给的A、B、C和D四个选项中,选出可以填入空白处的最佳选项。

"Mom, we want to write a book," my five-year-old twins, Delilah and Nathaniel, announced one day.

"Sure, I'll get some paper," I said. They had made so many "books" and I had all the 41 at hand.

"Mom, we want to make a 42 book. Like these!" Delilah said, holding up some picture books.

Were they 43? I thought. I didn't know how to get a book published. Still, I didn't want to destroy their 44. I said, "OK... What do you want it to be about?"

"An envelope that travels across the world spreading kindness," Nathaniel said, his eyes 45.

Over the next few months, they dreamed up more of the story. The main 46 were a pair of twins just like them. I wrote down everything, making sure not to 47 any detail. I was 48 with the twins' ambition to think big. But was their 49 too big? Anyway, I didn't want my kids to be 50.

Writing and publishing a book was 51 to me. I had to spend months 52; I looked up information online and watched videos; I joined first-time authors' groups and asked questions. Self-publishing seemed our best 53. Still, all the steps it would take were not 54.

Even after the kids and I finished writing the story, I wasn't 55. Could we really turn this into a book? 56, we managed to self-publish The Magical Envelope last Veteran's Day. The kids decided that 10 p of the 57 they got would go to a charity to help more people. I was proud of my kids.

The twins, now eight, continue to 58 me. They're creating a coloring book version of The Magical Envelope. They're launching a Facebook page to 59 what they're doing and get others involved. They 60 me of one thing—we can always think bigger and do more.

第二节 (共 10 小题;每小题 1.5 分,满分 15 分)

阅读下面短文,在空白处填入 1 个适当的单词或括号内单词的正确形式。

"Painting is just another way of keeping a diary," said Spanish artist Pablo Picasso. Wu Liren has been maintaining such a "diary" of the Grand Canal 61 1978.

The 65-year-old painter from Hangzhou city, Zhejiang province, has been using ink and brush for more than 40 years 62 (record) the beauty of the arterial(干线的) waterway, the hospitality of local residents and the richness of culture 63 flows all the way.

Wu says memories and emotions run deep in his paintings, and these are far 64 (important) than any technical perfection. "My art has always been about the Grand Canal. Sometimes I paint what I 65 (see) in the past and sometimes I reproduce what I heard about people who lived by the canal," he says.

Wu believes the Grand Canal is often compared with the West Lake, one of the most famous scenic 66 (attraction) in Hangzhou. "The West Lake is seen as a beautiful treasure that needs to be cared for. But the Grand Canal is like our mother, who has watched us grow up, earn a living along her busy banks, leave her in search of a better future 67 return to her embrace later on," he says.

Recently, Wu completed a 100-meter-long scroll(卷轴) painting of the canal's Tangxi-Xixing stretch in Hangzhou. "I have actually painted the entire Grand Canal in Hangzhou, 68 (borrow) historical anecdotes from every dynasty," Wu 69 (proud) says. "The story of the canal needs to be told and the culture it represents must 70 (pass) down."
