In speaking of experiences of labor, I'd like to share one of mine.

During our social practice this March we were required to work together to cook ourselves dinner. Naturally, it was tough for most of us, who had seldom done household chores before. Imagine the mess we created! Everyone was busy; washing the ingredients, sweating over fires, and fighting with stoves. But in the end, all the hard work paid off when we happily tasted the fruits of our labor.

Through this experience, not only have I mastered some life skills, but also come to appreciate what labor means to us and treasure its value.
