第二节

The driver responded, "It must feel good to be taken care of and protected like you are every day." Confused by what the driver talked about, she asked, "what do you mean?" The driver answered, "Every morning in the past week, a fine-looking gentleman in a military uniform has been standing across the street watching you get off the bus. He makes sure you cross the street safely and he watches until you enter your office building. Then he blows you a kiss, gives you a little salute and walks away. You are one lucky lady.”

With tears of happiness in her eyes, she stood motionlessly facing the opposite side of the street, as if staring at someone. Although she couldn’t physically see him, she definitely felt Mark’s presence. Susan thought she was actually lucky, for he had given her a gift more powerful than sight, a gift of love that can bring light where there is darkness. Just as Mark grew a little worried, he saw his wife break into a radiant smile and blow a kiss to his direction.

Finally, she found back herself — blind but attractive and confident as she used to be.
