M: Oh, hi, Ann. How have you been? And how's your new apartment working out?

W: Well, that's what I'm calling about. You see, I just can't stand Kitty any longer. Therefore, I've decided to look for a new place.

3. B

【原文】W: When would you like me to send those plans over to your office, Mr. Black?

M: It would be good if you could get them to me by Thursday afternoon, Ms. Barkley.

W: I think I can give them to you on Tuesday afternoon.

【原文】W: I used to love walking down these streets. Now, it feels like I'm a stranger in a child's dream somewhere!

M: All right, that's a cut. Mandy, I love the emotion, but every time you say that last line, you look at the camera. OK, again from the top...

【原文】M: Good morning, Sue! How is your holiday? Did you enjoy it?

M: Don't you have to buy any green vegetables? Oh, no, what a long checkout line! Do we have to stand in that line?

W: Yes, we do, but don't worry. The cashier can deal with each customer very quickly. But today, since we came in your Mini Cooper, I'm afraid both of us and the groceries can't fit in your car. Could we please take the taxi back instead?

W: I'm reading some news about global warming. And I read something great.

M: What did you read?

W: On Monday, President Barack Obama announced a new plan to limit pollution created by power plants. By 2030 power plants will release 32% less carbon dioxide compared with the amount in 2005.

M: That's really great.

W: Yes. I don't think it's too late to control global warming yet. If all nations work together, global warming won't be a problem for the next generation.

M: I totally agree. Oh, it's already 6:00 p. m. What about going out to eat now?

W: Why not? I'm kind of hungry now. And we can keep talking about this topic while eating out.

【原文】

W: I never thought I'd be the type to go on a cookery course! My mum and my sister always used to laugh at me, because though I love eating, I couldn't make anything myself. Then one day my cousin decided she wanted to have cooking classes. She didn't want to do them on her own, though. I agreed to go along. You could do one-day, three-day or one-week courses. We thought a week should be enough to get us started, so we chose that during the summer holidays.

When we got there on the first morning, loads of people had already arrived. I knew it was a popular course, with lots of teenagers like me there. What I hadn't expected was that there'd be so many teachers — you got plenty of help that way and I certainly needed it.

We learnt how to bake a cake in the first class. And that was a really good way to get started. Another thing we did was go out and visit places. We didn't go to any restaurants. There were a few markets nearby. And we visited one of the best ones. We passed a couple of supermarkets on the way, but we didn't go in.

参考范文

"You will be a wonderful narrator," she said, handing me a yellow daisy. "The narrator's part is every bit as important as the part of Alice. My darling, every role is remarkable. And you are a born storyteller." Her constant encouragement filled me with pride and confidence. From then on, every lunchtime witnessed my practicing lines with my mother, bathed in the soft midday light. Sometimes we just sat down under the big trees with golden daisies accompanying us, reading loudly and emotionally. Little by little, day by day, I even began to look forward to the coming of the play.

The day finally came and my mother sat among the audience. I knew she was there to bless me with confidence and calmness. Of course, everything went as smoothly as we had expected. The audience burst into cheers and gave us thunderous applause. I ran to hug my mother and embraced her tightly. "Mom! I did it!" She took out a bunch of yellow daisies and handed them to me. "Wow! The play won't be so successful without your beautiful narration!" Nodding her head in relief and gently stroking my face, Mother smiled and kissed me affectionately.
