There is no way they just drove into that water, thought Corion Evans. The 16-year-old was hanging out in a parking area underneath a Moss Point, Mississippi, highway in July when a car with three teenage girls inside rushed off a boat ramp and into the Pascagoula River. It came to rest some 20 feet from land, then sank. The driver, Evans would learn, had blindly followed wrong directions from her GPS.

It was around 2:30a.m. by the time Evans got to the river's edge. In the darkness, he could barely make out the girls clinging to the roof, the only part of the car still, barely, above water. But he could hear screaming.

Evans ripped off his shirt and shoes, tossed his phone down, then dived into the water, a river he knew alligators(鳄鱼) called home. He helped the first girl he saw and, keeping her head above water, led her ashore.

Just then, a man called out. Police Officer Garry Mercer had arrived. He dived into the river to help another of the girls. But halfway back to shore, she panicked and went underwater, pulling Mercer down with her.

Evans jumped back into the water and helped them until they could stand. "If he hadn't been there, who knows?" Mercer told the Washington Post.

There was still one girl in the water. Cora Watson, 19, could not swim. She was gulping water, struggling to stay afloat. And scared.

“I heard Cora screaming ‘Help!’ and I thought she was going to the dogs,” Caleb told WLOX in Biloxi.

“I just knew my last breath was coming,” Watson said. “My mind said, You’re slowly losing yourself.” She began to go under. Then, a jolt. “Corion had grabbed me.”

The three girls and Officer Mercer were taken to the hospital and released. They’re alive because Corion Evans risked his life to save them. They’re alive, says his mother, Marquita Evans, because Corion Evans broke his curfew.

But she’s not mad, she told the Post. “He had a good reason.”

24. According to paragraph 1, what can we know about the accident?

- A. The three teenage girls were about to hang out when they dropped into the river.
- B. The wrong navigation confused the driver and caused the accident.
- C. The car drove about 20 feet from the land and stopped on the water.
- D. The car crashed into the river while driving on a Moss Point, Mississippi, highway.

25. From the article, we can know that ____.

- A. During the rescue, some alligators attacked them.
- B. Evans saved the lives of the three girls and Officer Mercer.
- C. The first two rescued girls can swim.
- D. Seeing three girls who fell into the water, Evans called the police.

26. What is the meaning of the word underlined in paragraph 7?

- A. dying.
- B. dangerous.
- C. awkward.
- D. nervous.

27. What is Evans' mother's attitude towards this matter?

- A. Indifferent.
- B. Critical.
- C. Proud.
- D. Angry.

C

The Oxford Word of the Year 2022 winner may surprise you. The winning phrase was “goblin mode (哥布林模式)” – a type of behavior often seen as lazy. People who are in goblin mode tend to reject social expectations, such as usual gatherings.

This is not necessarily a bad thing, however. US language expert Ben Zimmer commented that the lifestyle means that “people are looking at social norms in new ways”. Many young people worldwide go “goblin mode” seeking to make peace with their true selves. Without pretty covers like digital editing, we are not always the perfect image that we tend to present to others. Staying true to ourselves, however, doesn’t mean that we must avoid troubles. Bilibili, a leading video platform, announced that elegance was the bullet comment (弹幕) of the year. It refers to the graceful and stylish manners. And traditionally, the word is more often used to describe people of higher social classes. But now, young people in China are using the word to emphasize an ability to control and balance life for ordinary people. From bravely facing troubles in life to sharing delightful moments and spreading joy, elegance is no longer a privilege. Rather, it is our positive attitude to life – that we will stay calm and strong no matter what life brings – that is most important.

Take pandemic as an example, it’s a topic that we cannot ignore. Three years into the pandemic, we are gradually letting go of our fears about it. It will likely not end dramatically, but rather result in coexistence between humans and the virus. Our life may never be the same as before the pandemic, but it doesn’t have to be. Video chats, online meetings and classes ... We are closer than ever to connecting digitally with each other on a new level. It’s time to face new opportunities and challenges in the year ahead. And remember: we have made it through the pandemic – is there anything that we cannot overcome?

28. What may people with “goblin mode” do?
 A. They may seek a fancy lifestyle. B. They may present a perfect image.
 C. They may post edited photographs. D. They may accept what they are.
29. What’s the real elegance according to young people?
 A. It’s a quality owned by people of higher social status.
 B. It’s a privilege only shared and valued by rich people.
 C. It’s a positive attitude towards ups and downs in life.
 D. It’s an ability to spread graceful and stylish manners.
30. The author introduces ‘real elegance’ probably _____.
 A. to inform us the importance of it B. to urge us to face challenges bravely
 C. to push us to pursue higher status D. to advise us to ignore pandemic
31. Which of the following saying can be applied to the last paragraph?
 A. Every cloud has a silver lining B. He who laughs last laughs best
 C. Where there is a will, there is a way D. Fear always springs from ignorance

D

Technology usually distracts us from nature. But now technology is “offering us an opportunity to listen to nonhumans in powerful ways, reviving our connection to the natural world,” wrote professor Karen Bakker in her new book, The Sounds of Life: How Digital Technology Is Bringing Us Closer to the Worlds of Animals and Plants.

All around the animal kingdom, there are sounds that we struggle to pick up and decipher. Elephants, for example, communicate with each other using infrasound (次声波), a sound frequency far below our human hearing range. Moreover, they even have their own ways to distinguish between threatening humans and non-threatening humans. Coral in the ocean also communicates with each other through sound waves, with one purpose being to attract baby coral to areas where it can successfully grow. This is a shocking fact as coral doesn’t have any ears! Scientists have placed listening devices in these environments to pick up sounds humans are normally unable to detect. After the sounds are recorded, AI is then able to determine their meaning, according to the news website Vox. There are now whole databases of whale songs and honeybee dances.

This technology can not only understand the animals, but also communicate back to them. For example, bees use dances to communicate to their peers where to go in search of nectar (花蜜). A research team in Germany, therefore, put the bee language AI database system into a robot bee, allowing the robot to create a dance routine that can tell the bees which direction to move, Vox reported. Whereas in the past language creation had been limited to mainly apes (类人猿), with there being many examples of chimpanzees (黑猩猩) having been taught sign language to communicate with humans, this new technology now allows humans to socialize with different animals throughout the animal kingdom.

32. How does the fact strike us that animals can communicate in their own way?
 A. It’s amazing and unbelievable B. It’s strange and ridiculous
 C. It’s attractive and reasonable D. It’s terrible and shocking
33. Which of the following statements is true according to paragraph 2?
 A. Humans find it rather easy to interpret the sounds of animals.
 B. Listening devices are placed so as to serve as ears for animals
 C. Elephants are able to tell which humans are friendly to them.
 D. Corals direct their babies to find food through sound waves.
34. What do we know from the last paragraph?
 A. Bees use dances to search for their peers.
 B. The robot bee are created to direct real bees.
 C. Apes can communicate with humans naturally.
 D. Language creation may be less limited in future.

35. What's the best title of the passage?

- A. AI changes our life in different ways B. AI lends us a chance to talk to animals
C. AI enables us to change nature greatly D. AI technology is a double-edged sword

第二节 (共 5 小题; 每小题 2 分, 满分 10 分)

阅读下面短文,从短文后的选项中选出可以填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

How to Stay Motivated for the Entire School Year

Every new school year brings the same age-old problem: 36 . What I want to do today is give you four different strategies that you can use to maintain a high level of motivation to do your work, to study diligently all throughout the entire semester.

Focus on a good start.

From the moment you walk into your very first class this semester, 37 . If you can do this right from the start, you're going to gain an implicit psychological pressure to keep doing it throughout the entirety of the rest of the semester.

Have a plan for your homework and study time.

If you think about your class time, that is highly regimented. You have a specific place you're supposed to be and the class is happening at a specific time. 38 . Maybe at the beginning of every single week, look ahead at your calendar and block out planned spaces of study time.

If you're realizing that your attention is fragmented or you've taken on too many commitments, then it could be a good strategic decision to give up that in order to raise your motivation to tackle the other things on your plate.

Make real fun a priority of the new semester.

You need that cycle of actual rest, which isn't just sleep, but it's, you know, respite from your work and actual fun time, and work. 40 . So, make time for real fun this semester and you're going to find that your motivational reserves maintain themselves throughout the entirety of that semester.

- A. make the commitment to sit up front and wring class for all it's worth
B. So, apply that logic to your homework and study time
C. Learn to avoid some difficulties
D. your motivation to learn is constantly drained as the semester passes slowly
E. You need that actual interplay between those two states of being
F. lack of motivational mantras or mindset hacks to maintain a hardworking attitude
G. Know when to quit

第二节 (共 10 小题; 每小题 1.5 分, 满分 15 分)

阅读下面短文, 在空白处填入 1 个适当的单词或括号内单词的正确形式。

Earth Day is April 22. Every year, people carry out all kinds of _____ 61. _____ (active) in an effort to better the planet's health.

One way to support this goal is _____ 62. _____ (grow) plants native to your area. This helps wildlife like birds and insects that evolved alongside native plants. For many of these animals, plant pollen(花粉) is their food.

Native pollinators(传粉者) often cannot recognize non-native plants as food. So planting non-native species creates so-called "food deserts" for pollinators including bees, birds, bats, butterflies and more. Doug Tallamy, a professor, found that non-native plant species can harm the 63. (nature) food chain.

Humans depend strongly on insects. 64. them, we would have no flowering plants, 65. would harm the food web that supports important animals. Birds, for example, depend on plants for food and spread 66. (they) seeds while keeping the populations of harmful insects down.

Insects support plants that provide oxygen, clean our water, capture carbon and add nutrients to the soil. That 67. (build) topsoil and prevents flooding. Without insects, the biosphere – 68. living parts of the Earth – would rot because of the loss of insect decomposers(分解). Humans simply could not survive that, Tallamy said.

In addition to 69. (provide) food and habitat for insects and other wildlife, native plants are able to grow 70. (easy) and do not require much care. That means less watering and less fertilizing. The situation is a win-win for gardeners and pollinators.

第四部分写作（共两节，满分35分）

第一节 短文改错（共10小题；每小题1分，满分10分）

Our class had a heating debate on chemical agriculture and organic agriculture last week.

It is obvious that using chemical fertilizers have many disadvantages. For instance, the chemicals staying inside the crops can lead to cancer or other illness. However, the vegetables grow so fast that it contain little nutrition.

The reasons that organic foods are becoming increasing popular are as follows. The first one is that people attach great importance health. Secondly, natural fertilizers make vegetables and fruit taste and nutritious. What's more, the produce grows in clean water and never uses pesticides.

In my opinion, health is wealth but it is wise to choose organic food.

第二节 书面表达(满分25分)

最近你校对学生的书写情况进行了一项问卷调查，调查结果显示，有85%的学生认为自己的字迹不好看，并且没有改善的打算，理由如下图，请就此写一篇英文短文向你校英文报投稿。
