Dear Mark,

Congratulations on your upcoming graduation! Knowing that you are at a loss about where to work and settle down in China, I'd like to recommend my city -- Shenzhen -- to you.

The most important reason is that Shenzhen is where you'll feel young and passionate to start a career and pursue success. The government makes great efforts to provide various opportunities of living, studying and working. Besides, the city is internationalized, vigorous and modern, and is home to lots of western people like you. Therefore, you'll feel home here though your country is on the other side of the globe. Last but not least, you'll be greeted by lovely sunshine most of the year. Just come and have a look at this coastal city, and I'm sure you'll love it!

Hope you'll come and find your dream job, and embrace an infinite future. There is no doubt that you'll have an incredible prospect in China!

One possible version:

Soon came the day of the performance, and my sister did the only solo. As she stood on that stage, I couldn't help but feel anxiety and embarrassment. Her voice quivered as she started, and I buried my head in my hands; but surprisingly, with each note following, something magical happened. The audience, a bit noisy at first, began to listen attentively. My sister sang with a passion and sincerity that I had never witnessed before. Her voice was pure and hauntingly beautiful, filling the auditorium with an emotional resonance that touched everyone's hearts. I lifted my head with my mouth wide open. When she finished, sincere cheers burst out from the audience.

Wrapped in both guilt and joy, I went to the backstage to find my sister. There, amidst the bustling of students, parents, and teachers congratulating her, I hugged her tightly, my eyes still wet with tears. "You were amazing," I whispered, my voice filled with genuine admiration. She beamed with pride, her eyes finally meeting mine without hesitation. At that moment, as we shared a profound connection, I realized that her performance had done much more than change my perception of her; it had transformed our relationship forever. It was the beginning of a new chapter, one where I would proudly stand by her side, celebrating her talents, and cherishing the beautiful person she was, Asperger Syndrome and all.
