第二部分 阅读理解（共两节，满分40分）

第一节（共15小题；每小题2分，满分30分）

阅读下列短文，从每题所给的A、B、C和D四个选项中选出最佳选项。

A

Boracay, Philippines

Boracay is a tiny island and its main attraction is “White Beach”, a perfect postcard white sand beach surrounded by palm trees, dive shops, bars and restaurants. Our favourite seat to enjoy the sunset is “Diniwid Beach” located to the north of White Beach. After the perfect sunset, choose a bar to enjoy live music and party all night long.

Santorini, Greece

Santorini offers a unique landscape of beaches in exotic (异国的) colors of black, red, and white, a product of volcanic sand. Imagine swimming in the warm mythic Aegean sea, with volcano and sunsets as a backdrop. The island architecture is very distinctive, churches are built into caves and the whitewashed houses, blue-domed churches and paved paths are astonishingly beautiful.

Lofoten Island, Norway

The Lofoten Islands are a spectacular sight indeed. With deep fjords (峡湾) and splendid mountains, this is a wilderness unequalled in its beauty, where giant sea eagles soar. Milder in climate than their position suggests, visitors are attracted to the islands to experience the Northern Lights and Midnight Sun. Saint John Island. Caribbean

Life moves at a slower pace here. It is a place where wildlife abounds (大量存在) and all is at peace. The National Park dominates here, covering more than half of the island. It is just nine miles from one end to the other and with countless bird species to spot and dolphins in the warm Caribbean waters, it's no surprise that this is a destination that draws nature lovers. This is a place to rest and relax.

21. What can you do on Boracay island?

- A. See giant sea eagles soar.
- B. See churches built into caves.
- C. Spot various birds and dolphins.
- D. Enjoy live music and party all night.

22. Where can you experience the Northern Lights and Midnight Sun?

- A. On Boracay island.
- B. On Santorini island.
- C. On Lofoten island.
- D. On Saint John island.

23. What is the purpose of the text?

- A. To introduce.
- B. To inform.
- C. To advertise.
- D. To persuade.

B

Robbie Gay is a young boy with a kind heart. He had a horrible start to life, hospitalized twice with brain injuries before entering the foster (寄养) care system. When he was finally adopted by his parents, he was so hurt by his experiences that he was unable to cry.

However, he found therapy (治疗) in a most unlikely place—his local animal shelter. There he took comfort in caring for the older dogs who'd been left behind. "People don't want older dogs. They only want puppies," Robbie explained. His ability to empathize (移情) with the older dogs obviously comes from his own shocking experience, as his mom shared, "He knows what it's like not to be loved and cared for."

Now in a safe and loving home, he's able to open his heart completely to these unfortunate dogs and practice compassion. It was this kindness that led him to find his tears again when one of his foster dogs died.

One of the difficulties in caring for the older dogs is that many don't stay alive for long. But Robbie insists on staying with them right up until they pass away, as he quite rightly says, "I don't think of when they're going, I think of how they feel right now."

Robbie is unusual in that he not only wants to care for aging dogs, he also hopes to foster children when he grows up. He truly shows compassion and understanding, even if it leaves him heartbroken when his four-legged friends depart too soon. Hopefully, Robbie will continue to care for others, through his beautiful heart, continue to heal and feel loved with his wonderful furry family and the human one!

24. What made Robbie care for older dogs in his local animal shelter?

- A. His childhood dream.
- B. His studying background.
- C. His early experience.
- D. His family's encouragement.

25. Which of the following can best describe Robbie?

- A. Generous and caring.
- B. Confident and creative.
- C. Energetic and active.
- D. Ambitious and considerate.

26. What does Robbie care most while looking after the old dogs?

- A. Where they came from.
- B. When they will pass away.

C. Why they were left behind.
27. What is the best title for the text?
A. A Boy Suffering a lot.
C. A Boy Finding His Tears.

D. How they feel at the moment.
B. A Boy with a Terrible Life
D. A Boy Caring for Older Dogs
C

During the pandemic, when going to the gym wasn't a safe option, people began exploring virtual workouts (虚拟训练) from home. Many of them now say they won't go back. It has helped many people.

Linda Munson, 56, has worked a desk job from home since the shutdown. She's never been much of a gym person. In 2021, she was hospitalized with COVID and diagnosed with diabetes (糖尿病). When her doctor told her she needed to focus more on her health, she said she couldn't do it. The doctor said, "Well, we'll wait for you to have a heart attack." That was her wake-up call. She started walking.

One day, her son brought home a VR headset called an Oculus Quest. Munson discovered the popular fitness app Supernatural and was hooked. Supernatural lets you swing your arms at targets or stretch with a coach in front of you and in your ear while you're listening to music.

Linda Munson exercises in her living room. She takes a deep breath after using Supernatural, saying many Supernatural users post selfies in a Facebook group after a workout and cheer for each other.

Currently, Supernatural membership offers hundreds of workouts and costs $179 per year. The Oculus Quest headset needed to access it is $299. A handful of other workout apps made for VR headsets are a bit cheaper. "It's worth it," Munson says. She lost 50 pounds in a year and didn't have to take diabetes medicine and can now play with her active grandchildren in her yard.

28. Why did people explore virtual workouts according to paragraph 1?

A. It is not secure to go to the gym. B. It is too expensive to go to the gym.
C. It is out of fashion to go to the gym. D. It costs too much time to go to the gym.

29. When did Linda Munson realize she had to exercise?

A. When she suffered a heart attack.
B. When she was diagnosed with diabetes.
C. When she has worked a desk job from home.
D. When her doctor predicted she would suffer a heart attack.

30. Why did Linda Munson start to use Supernatural?

A. Her son advised her to use it.
B. Her doctor forced her to use it.
C. She became interested in it by accident.
D. Her grandchildren wanted her to play with them.

31. What is Linda Munson's attitude towards the app?

A. Negative. B. Approving. C. Doubtful. D. Disappointed.

D

Student scientists from the Indian Institute of Technology Madras recently demonstrated the power of combining hardware with artificial intelligence by developing a water assessment device. The team won the $ 200,000 top prize at IBM's Global Call For Code Challenge for 2021 for their innovative technology.

Developed by the team that calls itself "Saaf Water," the device has a lot of uses. The low-cost device could help save millions of lives in India if deployed on the large-scale. It not only senses decontaminated (净化) water but also provides a comprehensive summary of the water quality while suggesting purifying methods.

Using IBM Cloud and IBM Watson, the students developed the tech to especially cater to rural areas in India. Saaf Water was in theory when one of the developer, Hrishikesh Bhandari's mother fell ill due to unknown consumption of contaminated water, which came from a public ground water source.

"When we came back to Goa, her treatment was going on and the doctor said it's due to a very rare disease caused due to polluted water," Bhandari told Indiatimes. Three months into her treatment, Bhandari and her teammates decided to develop Saaf Water in hopes of preventing such kind of disasters.

Saaf Water timely monitors the water and informs the community in real time. In addition, Saaf Water also suggests purification (净化) methods that may be best for different locations and geographies.

Saaf Water's goal is simple and straightforward. With their breathtaking machine, they give local communities the power to save lives. The data is studied in real time by Saaf Water, which does analysis of the contamination.

32. What does the underlined word "innovative" in paragraph 1 mean?

- A. Strange. B. Contradictory. C. Fashionable. D. Revolutionary.

33. How does the device work?

- A. It purifies drinking water directly.
B. It separates dirty from clean water.
C. It makes clean water from used water.
D. It monitors the water and offers purification ways.

34. What is Saaf Water's aim to develop the device?

- A. To finish an academic task. B. To help secure lives in local communities.
C. To collect money for the poor. D. To raise people's awareness of water safety.

35. Where is the text most likely from?

- A. A diary. B. A novel. C. A magazine. D. A notebook.

第二节 (共5小题; 每小题2分, 满分10分)

根据短文内容, 从短文后的选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Men and The Art of Listening

The world today is moving at a so high pace that we rarely stop to listen to each other. We've all been in conversations with someone who we felt wasn't listening. They may keep looking at their watch or at other people around them. They nod and say yes-but we feel like a stranger talking to a wall. 36. It's even more of an issue for us as men when it comes to how we relate to one another.

To listen is to love.

Allowing someone to open up and share their life with us communicates the simple truth: 37. Being humble listeners does not mean that our opinions or advice aren't valuable. But it does mean that regularly demonstrating the simple art of listening is part of doing everything in love.

38.

When we are with someone who is processing something difficult, to listen with compassion can often look like listening without feeling pressed to solve or advise. It comforts the one who is talking in a silent way. Women tend to be better at this form of listening. They can talk for hours and not necessarily be focused on sharing information. ___39___.

To listen is to be needed deep down.

___40___, it may look like getting something off your chest, or saying what you really think without fear of judgment or remarks. But we need friends we can complain to and confide in. And we need to be that friend to others, offering a compassionate, reliable ear.

- A. Listening with compassion.
- B. To listen, therefore, is to love another.
- C. To listen is to support someone else "quietly."
- D. Instead, they are letting out everything in mind.
- E. Listening is a skill badly missing in today's world.
- F. We need to be able to talk freely with a friend and know we've been heard.
- G. We depend on it that someone may lend a hand if we are really in desperate trouble.
