第一节:

Dear Tom,

How is everything going on with you? I'm delighted to receive your letter in which you asked me how to advocate China-style songs. My suggestions are as follows:

First of all, it will be a good choice to introduce some popular Chinese singers like Jay Chou who do well in China-style composition. In addition, only by singing their songs live will your audience be arrested, so you can invite some singers from music department and extend some invitations. Last but not least, you'd better hold a speech on the features of China-style songs where people can get some insights into the China-style songs.

It would be better if you could take my proposal into due consideration. I do hope your culture festival will go smoothly and be warmly welcome by all the participants!

Yours,

Li Hua

第二节:

Meanwhile, her new classmates were busying working on something. They were going to give Eva their "hearts". Quickly but quietly, Ms. Robins, with an exquisite paper bag she fetched from her office, was walking around the classroom to collect the candy hearts. Growing heavy with the paper bag was the students' welcome for their new classmate. Sitting beside Eva, Chase felt his heart racing and palms sweating. In order not to ruin the new year surprise for Eva, he pretended to be discussing math problems with her to occupy her attention. The stone in his heart finally dropped when Ms Robins tiptoed towards him and placed the paper bag on his hands.

"Here's your new year gift, Eva. It's from everyone." Surprise written on Eva's face, she turned around and was greeted by the sunny smiles on her classmates' faces. "Open it," I encouraged. No sooner had she opened the paper bag than everybody cheered, "Happy New Year". The candies which were made in the shape of hearts blurred her eyes. If only she had been able to express how much this precious gift meant to her. Springing from her seat, she stepped forward and bowed to her new but considerate classmates, who not only erased her anxiety but also planted the seed of hope in her heart. What a hearty welcome!

M: Lucy, one of my long-lost friends will come around to have a meal with me. Afterwards, we will hang out in the walking district nearby.

W: So will you dine out?

M: Nope, I will cook for her, but my cooking will surely upset her.

W: Don't worry and I recommend a very useful app, definitely a hit recently.

M: Wow, could you tell me the name of it?

W: No problem. It is called Sweetisine, integrating the word sweet and cuisine. And it offers so many recipes to choose from.

W: Good morning. Our company wants to rent your stadium to hold a staff volleyball competition. I hope your coach, Harvey Holland, will serve as a judge this time.

M: Sorry, madam! He has quit this job. However, we have landed a new one named Randy Lee, really experienced and professional.

W: Well, I would prefer to work with Mr. Holland again. The last time we came here, Harvey Holland well guided us. Could you give me contact information to find him?

M: It is against our company's policy to offer you such kind of private information. I think you can get in touch with Mr. Lee and tell him your competition's details. And then you can decide whether you will make him your judge.

W: Fine, I will try to phone Randy later.

M: Hello, I'd like to send some books to my daughter and this is the address. What is the size and weight limit?

W: It is 10 dollars per kilo. The size is 100mm × 100mm × 100mm. It also must be tied with string.

M: Fine, but how long will it be delivered to New York?

W: Two days by train or one day by air. We have daily flights at midday. And if we collect the parcel right now, then it will catch that flight and arrive within 24 hours.

M: Let me see. It's already Tuesday. So I have to choose the latter one. And how about the postage?

W: According to the weight and distance, I guess/suggest it is roughly 30 dollars. If you want urgent express delivery, you are expected to pay 10 dollars more.

M: No, thanks.

M: OK, now please confirm your information and sign on this note.

W: How old is your grandpa now?

M: He's already 80. Incredibly, he began to learn French 3 years ago.

W: Whoa, that's amazing! Why did he resolve to step into the world of French?

M: Yeah, he just travels a lot, making himself realize that French is of great use.

W: So how does he learn French?

M: He always listens to French songs and even looks up the unknown words in the lyrics.

W: Wow, unbelievable at his age. Does he turn to you for help?

M: Of course he does like that very often. He frequently talks with me in French and asks me to polish his French essays or poems. Sometimes better than my students' works.

W: Haha, can he write poems? It is in fact demanding even for native speakers.

M: Yes, he can. I remember that you were fond of poems in high school, especially poems written by Louis Aragon, a French poet. Gone are the days when we spent time together in high school. I really miss the old days.

W: Me, too.

Text 10 社区大学现状 187

Some students take community college classes to get job training. Others go to community colleges to take lower-cost classes before moving to a four-year university. But recent research suggests that more and more students are no longer choosing to attend community colleges. Some students say credits for classes at community colleges do not gain recognition by four-year colleges, and some employers say workers from community colleges are not always ready for jobs. At the same time, though college education is useful, there are many jobs for people without a college education, which makes people believe they do not need college. Unexpectedly, the number of students at U.S. community colleges has dropped by 37 percent, or about 2.6 million since 2020. Those numbers come from an occupation research center, a non-profit group. During the same period, the cost of higher education in the U.S. went up sharply. Many private four-year colleges can cost $40,000 per year. However, community colleges cost, on average, is even less than $4,000 per year. Moreover, researchers are remotely investigating headmasters of community colleges about their policies related to the school fees.
