Dear Jim,

Knowing you find it difficult to master the pronunciation of Chinese characters when you are learning Chinese by yourself, I am writing to tell you that it is common for one who has just started to learn Chinese and that there is no need to worry about it too much. Now I will share with you some tips to improve your pronunciation.

First of all, listen to and watch more Chinese movies and TV plays, which will help to improve your pronunciation and intonation. In addition, you had better make friends with Chinese people and dare to communicate with them in Chinese. Don't worry about making mistakes, because they won't laugh at you, but point out the mistakes to you.

Hope my suggestions will be helpful to you.

Yours,

Li Hua

My mind was playing Pingpong. His old and black shoes flashed through my mind. But my gaze again fell on the brand new Penny Loafers. I was fascinated by these gleaming shoes and couldn't take my eyes off them. I was about to spend all my ten dollars on them when I recollected Dad's worn-out shoes. The gleam of the loafers started to dull. I took shoes of my dad's size from the clearance rack and darted to the checkout counter.

I ran back to the garage and put Dad's new shoes on the seat in his car. The moment we got in the car Dad picked up the box. When he opened it he just stared without saying a word. A mixture of guilt and delight came from the bottom of my heart. He looked first at the shoes and then at me. "I thought you need a new pair of shoes more than I do." I broke the silence. Dad put his hand on my shoulder and we sat looking at each other for a moment. Nothing else was said. Dad started the car and we went home.

Text 1

M: I like the color you painted the walls. Why did you decide on purple?

W: I was inspired by a movie I saw last month.

M: I think you should get a new carpet. This one doesn't match anything in the room.

Text 2

W: Would you pick up a dozen eggs and a liter of milk for me?

M: Sure. Do you need anything for lunch?

W: No. Wait a minute! Would you get some cake, too?

Text 3

M: Do you want to go out dancing today?

W: I can't. I promised my grandma I'd take her to the market in the morning.

M: We could still go dancing tonight.

W: But I can't stay out late tonight and then get up early tomorrow.

Text 4

M: What was the problem?

W: The guy in the shop said I have an oil leak. It will take him a while to repair it. It's going to cost me a fortune.

M: You're just lucky it stopped working close to a service station.

Text 5

W: I hope the typhoon won't be too bad.

M: Me, too. The last one was horrible. It shut down the city for days.

W: The forecaster said it's going to hit tomorrow afternoon.

Text 6

M: Sorry to bother you, but didn't we meet at a sales conference in Detroit last month?

W: I don't think so, but I believe we took the same course at a night school a few months ago.

M: Yes, that's right. I remember seeing you there now. I thought you looked very familiar, but I just couldn't recall where I had met you.

W: Well, it has been a few months. Anyway, how long have you been working out in this fitness center?

Text 7

W: There you are! I've been waiting for you for three hours. Where have you been?

M: I'm sorry. I was stuck in a meeting and then, when we left, a bunch of people wanted to go out for a drink.

W: So you went?

M: Yeah. I wanted to call you on my cell phone, but I didn't want to be rude.

W: Oh please. Everybody uses cell phones and if you were really that worried about what they thought, you could've gone outside for a minute to call me.

Text 8

M: Hi, my name is James Campbell and I reserved a table for four at 6 pm.

W: Let me check the list. Yes, I found your name here. We've arranged a table right next to the fireplace for you. Is it all right with you?

M: Sure. That's perfect. Also, I ordered a special chocolate cake to celebrate my mother's birthday when I talked to your manager, John, on the phone. Is it ready?

W: Yes, we'll serve it after the meal as you requested. Would you like to be seated now? I'll bring you something to drink while you look at the menu.

Text 9

W: Mmm. This coffee is really strong.

M: I like it that way.

W: So do I. During my last class all I was thinking about was coming here and tasting the coffee.

M: Sounds like it wasn't too exciting.

W: I was bored to death. I'm in that class only because it's a requirement, so I have to stick it out. Do you have any classes like that?

M: I have only one big lecture class — World History. And the professor's the best. It's so interesting. I'm always on the edge of my seat. And when we have discussions, the room is filled with electricity.

W: Too bad. I already took World History.

M: You know, I was lucky to be in her class because I found myself thinking a lot about what she said. You should come with me to class sometime, just to see what I mean.

W: You've got me really curious about this teacher. I think I'll take you up on your idea to visit your class.

Text 10

M: Welcome! Please come in and gather over here around the tables. My name is Adam Smith, and I'm the librarian here. I'll show you around today and explain how to use these facilities. Now, we're at the gate of the library. Upon entering the door, you'll find that the restrooms are on your left-hand side, and opposite them is a Photocopy Room. Many of you are wondering about the check-in and check-out process. What you have to do is go to the Circulation Desk, which is to the east of the Photocopy Room. The Reading Room is a really large area in the center of the library, just to the north of the Circulation Desk. I'm sure you won't miss it. If you're here to do research, this is where you should bring books to look through. However, if you're here to do any group projects or other interactive activities, I advise you to use one of the study rooms, which are just to the east of the Reading Room. Moving on to the southeast corner, we have the Periodicals Section, just next to the study rooms. We have a collection of different newspapers and magazines in this section. You can get last week's weather reports, or all the top stories five years ago — some of our books can go back 20 years to the time when our school library was built. Ah, our first question! Yes?
