Special Food Places to Try In Singapore

It's an unpleasant fact that local food places are usually meant to cater to meat-eaters. It can be difficult to find a tasty food place that caters to meat-free diet. Here are some options to show you don't need meat for a satisfactory treat.

Vegan Burg

Vegan Burg has a surprisingly diverse range of plant-based burgers. From Hawaiian Teriyaki to Char-Grilled Satay, the menu promises to tempt even the most hardcore meat lovers. And that's not even getting into the add-ons and sides it offers, such as mushroom fries and barbecue potatoes.

Woods Square Tower, #01-06, Singapore 737737

Genesis Restaurant

This eatery proves that meat-free dishes can be as hearty and flavourful as their meat-based counterparts. Genesis Restaurant is especially known for its juicy dumplings, spring rolls, pork-free noodles and tofu cheesecake.

Havelock Road, #B1-01, Singapore 059763

WellSmoocht Collective

WellSmoocht is a cafe and dessert bar which specialises in plant-based ice cream. Made from brown rice, sugar cane juice and fruits or nut butters, Smoocht's rice ~~4/12~~ as they call it, comes in a wide variety of delicious flavours such as Earl Grey Lavender, Rose Coconut and Gula Melaka.

Sin Ming Centre, #01-03, Singapore 575628

Green Common

This one-stop plant-based eatery and marketplace has a delicious menu of mouth-watering meat-free dishes, from Japanese cuisine like sushi and miso glazed fillet to Western dishes like fishless tacos and pasta, as well as local favourites such as seafood laksa and even buah keluak rice.

HarbourFront Walk, #169-170, Singapore 098585

21. Who is the passage intended for?
- A. Those who want to lose weight.
 - B. Those who don't eat meat or fish.
 - C. Those who can't go without meat.
 - D. Those who prefer home-made food.
22. What is Genesis Restaurant famous for?
- A. Chinese-friendly food.
 - B. Plant-based burgers.
 - C. Plant-based ice-cream.
 - D. Japanese seafood.
23. Where should you go if you have a sweet tooth?
- A. Woods Square Tower, #01-06.
 - B. Havelock Road, #B1-01.
 - C. Sin Ming Centre, #01-03.
 - D. HarbourFront Walk, #169-170.

B

A few years ago, I was leaving the kennel(养狗场)where I worked, only to find a baby goat at the end of the driveway. The kennel's owners are known animal rescuers and I figured someone outside dumped him over the fence.

I'm an animal lover and I've brought home dogs, cats, horses, chickens and fish, but never goats. The tiny kid was too adorable to resist. I named him Quincy, and with the help of some experienced friends, bottle-fed him in my bathroom.

高三英语试题卷第4页(共12页)

Quincy proved to be quite special. When he was about a week old, I tapped my fingers on the bathroom floor and said, “Lie down.” I was amazed when he dropped down. I was even more amazed when he did it three times in a row,

A quick study, Quincy learned to lie down, bow, and turn in a circle in no time. He is house-trained, jumps in the back of my SUV when I say “load up,” and spends the day wandering with my dogs, whom he considers his brothers and sisters. He knows the name of everything I feed him — apples, water, carrots, and strawberries.

I love to train animals and often take my dogs to shows where they can perform their tricks. Quincy did his first show when he was just six weeks old. He knew only a few tricks then, but he did them perfectly and never misbehaved or got nervous in front of the crowd.

Now he has a whole inventory: He’ll shake hooves(蹄), come when called, walk on a rope, wave, smile for the camera, and more. Quincy and my dogs perform regularly at schools, nursing homes, and charity events. Quincy can even “read” his tricks off cue cards(提示板), which always earns the most applause.

It’s hard to believe that the goat kid nobody wanted turned out to be one of the smartest and most good-natured animals I’ve ever had.

24. What can we learn about the baby goat from Paragraph 1?
- A. He was injured. B. He was sold.
C. He was deserted. D. He was mistreated.
25. What made the author decide to bring the baby goat home?
- A. His affection for the little goat. B. The request of the kennel’s owner.
C. The advice of his friends. D. His strong desire to keep a pet.
26. What does the author think of Quincy?
- A. Faithful and shy. B. Strong and aggressive.
C. Hardworking and brave. D. Intelligent and obedient.
27. Which is the most suitable title for the text?
- A. Quincy: A Poor Creature B. Quincy: The Show Goat
C. Quincy: My Best Friend D. Quincy: A Special Trainer

C

Many of us were lucky enough to have some degree of choice over what we eat. But are the decisions we make as free as we think? What if there is something other than our own hunger that influences what we eat?

高三英语试题卷第5页 (共 12 页)

Look through social media sites and you will see picture after picture of perfectly presented and extremely delicious-looking meals. While the smell and taste of food can have a powerful effect on our appetite, are endless posts of steaming snacks and inviting dishes more than just a feast for our eyes?

Certainly, it appears we're hugely influenced by other people — especially those closest to us — when it comes to what we eat. Our eating habits are also influenced by what we see. “There is some evidence that if you see pictures of food, that visual stimulation can make you feel a desire to eat.

But social media is one place where social and visual aspects meet. There is evidence that if friends in your social network post regularly about particular types of food, it could lead you to copy them. If all your friends on social media are posting pictures of themselves consuming fast food, it's going to cause you to form a false belief that eating fast food is what all people do.

Research suggests photos of fast food are more likely to make us feel good. Humans tend to, naturally, seek out high-calorie food — an ability that helped our ancestors survive when they hunted for food. In comparison, healthier foods are often seen as boring. Scientists are becoming increasingly concerned about food-related content on social media which is making us thinking differently about food. Social media algorithms(算法)promote content that users respond more, so viewing more unhealthy food means seeing even more of it on our social media.

28. Which statement will the author probably agree with?
- A. Social media should be prohibited.
B. We always choose what we eat at will.
C. Social media may affect our own food choices.
D. It's inappropriate to ignore friends' posts of dishes.
29. What can be inferred about photos of friends eating fast food?
- A. They can be misleading. B. They are time-consuming.
C. They are all made-up. D. They are a bond of friendship.
30. Why are photos of fast food more likely to make us feel good?
- A. They are more beautiful. B. The cause is hard to explain.
C. They are associated with health. D. The cause is biologically rooted.
31. How do scientists feel about food-related content on social media?
- A. It's inspiring. B. It's worrying.
C. It's appealing. D. It's boring.

On January 7, David Bennett went into the operating room at the University of Maryland Medical Center for a surgical procedure never performed before on a 7/12. The 57-year-old Maryland resident had been hospitalized for months due to a life threatening disease. His heart was failing him and he needed a new one.

Bennett's condition left him unresponsive to treatment and ineligible(不合格) for the transplant list or an artificial heart pump. The physician-scientists at the center, however, had another — also risky — option: transplant(移植)a heart from a genetically-modified pig.

“It was either die or do this transplant,” Bennett had told surgeons a day before the operation. “I want to live. I know it's a shot in the dark, but it's also my last choice.”

It took the medical team eight hours to finish the operation, making Bennett the first human to successfully receive a pig's heart. “It's working and it looks normal. We are thrilled, but we don't know what tomorrow will bring us. This has never been done before,” Barkley Griffith, who led the transplant team, told the New York Times.

While it's only been five days since the operation, the surgeons say that Bennett's new pig heart was, so far, functioning as expected and his body wasn't rejecting(排斥) the organ. They are still monitoring his condition closely.

“I think it's extremely exciting,” says Robert Montgomery, transplant surgeon and director of the NYU Langone Transplant Institute, who was not involved in Bennett's operation. The result of the procedure was also personally meaningful for Montgomery, who received a heart transplant in 2018 due to a genetic disease that may also affect members of his family in the future. “It's still in the early days, but still the heart seems to be functioning. And that in and of itself is an extraordinary thing. Up to now most experimental heart transplant procedures have been done between pigs and other animals. This is the first time that surgeons have taken it into a living human.”

高三英语试题卷第7页(共12页)

32. What do the words “a shot in the dark” underlined in Paragraph 3 mean?
- A. Something that costs a fortune.
B. Something impossible to succeed.
C. Something drawing public attention.
D. Something with an uncertain outcome.
33. What is Barkley Griffith’s attitude to Bennett’s post-operation condition?
- A. Negative. B. Cautious. C. Optimistic. D. Uncaring.
34. What is the text mainly about?
- A. The heated debate over the pig heart transplant.
B. David Bennett’s contribution to medical research.
C. The first experimental pig heart transplant in the world.
D. The first successful pig heart transplant into a living human.
35. In which section of a magazine may this text appear?
- A. Political Affairs. B. Global Entertainment.
C. Sci-Tech Front. D. Financial Window.

第二节 (共 5 小题; 每小题 2 分, 满分 10 分)

How to Learn a Language as an Adult

If you dream of learning a foreign language, your age does not disqualify you. Make the process more fun — and by extension, more successful — with these tips.

Find your motivation.

Wish you had paid more attention in high school Spanish classes? 36. Perhaps all you wanted out of the class was a good grade, or to fulfill a graduation requirement. Linguists (语言学家) call these “extrinsic (外在的) motivators,” but the most successful language students are “intrinsically motivated, sincerely devoted to their own learning. 37, whether on a grand vacation in Spain or on your couch watching Spanish soap operas.

Pick your tools.

38, but you’ll figure out which resources work best for you. Mobile apps such as Duolingo and Babbel gamify your learning, so if you could easily spend hours playing on your phone, you'll likely find these similarly addictive. And don't forget books. McGraw Hill and Barron's offer excellent textbooks with answer keys to let you see how you're doing.

immerse (沉浸) yourself in your chosen language as much as you can. Watch movies or listen to songs, even if they are just on in the background. Periodically look around you and see how many things you can name in the language you're studying. Or, better yet, label items around your home with those words. You'll have no choice but to see them and, in very little time, learn them.

Get social.

Practicing with other people helps solidify what you've already learned and make you more aware of which ideas you're able to express. 40, though various websites and apps such as languageexchange.com, HelloTalk, and TalkAbroad can connect you with some, either free or for a small fee.

- A. Dive in
- B. Just do it
- C. Consider why you didn't
- D. It might take some trial and error
- E. You might as well practice on your own
- F. So pick a language you are excited to use
- G. They need not to be native speakers you chat with
