A number of events are going on at the Cooperage Project, located at 1030 Main Street in Honesdale. Enjoy!

The Cooperage Maker Fair

The Cooperage Maker Fair will be held from 10:00 am to 4:00 pm on Friday, June 12 on the grounds of the City Museum. The Maker Fair is a place where people show what they are making—a showcase for invention and creativity, and share what they are learning. Anyone interested in presenting their projects, hobbies and experiments should apply to take part at www.cooperagemakerfair.com.

Such Sweet Thunder

At 7:00 pm on Wednesday, June 17, there will be a film screening of comedy Twelfth Night as part of the Such Sweet Thunder: Shakespeare's Plays on Film Series. Dr. Robert Dugan will introduce the play with a brief background. Admission is free, but due to limited seating, booking is required at www.suchsweetthunder.com.

Sounds Like Teen Spirit

On Thursday, June 24, there will be an event called Sounds Like Teen Spirit from 3:00 pm to 5:00 pm. Sounds Like Teen Spirit is designed to provide an opportunity to showcase the talent of our community's youth. School-aged students are encouraged to share their performing art on stage at the Cooperage Project!

Great Brazilian Music Tour

On Saturday, June 27, a fantastic opportunity is ready for you to listen to some great Brazilian music by the musical group Minas. It is from 2:30 pm to 4:30 pm, and doors open at 2:00 pm. We encourage children and their families to come to learn all about the rhythm, excitement and sound of Brazilian music. The two-hour performance is sure to be fun for the whole family. The admission charge is $ 5 for each person, and all the money will go to the local food bank. You can also give away old clothes and money at the entrance.

property ownership—in the form of a board game. In 1904, she patented her Landlord's Game, which consisted of a circuit of streets and landmarks for sale.

Magie's game contained two sets of rules: The Prosperity rules and the Monopolist rules. [The Prosperity rules stated that every player should gain each time someone acquired a new property. The game was won (by all!) when the player starting with the least money doubled his or her fortune.] Under Monopolist rules, on the other hand, each player advanced by acquiring properties and collecting rent from all who landed there later. Whoever managed to bankrupt the other players won the game. The purpose of the dual sets of rules, said Magie, was for players to understand how these different approaches to property can lead to different social outcomes: "all win" or "win all".

The game soon became a hit on college campuses and among Quaker communities, and some people modified (稍作修改) the game board. An unemployed player named Charles Darrow sold this modified version to the manufacturer Parker Brothers as his own. However, when the game's true origin came to light, Parker Brothers bought the patent from Magie for only $ 500. They then re-launched the game as Monopoly, including only the rules leading to the triumph of one over all. Darrow was publicized as the inventor who had become a millionaire from selling the game. Thus a rags-to-riches myth was created, ironically exemplifying Monopoly's implicit (含蓄的) values: Chase wealth and crush your opponents if you want to come out on top.

28) What is this passage mainly about?

- A. The creation and modification of a board game.
- B. A fight between patent owners of a popular game.
- C. A socio-economic victory behind a landlord game.
- D. The person who became a millionaire from a fun game.

29) What was the main purpose of Magie's Prosperity rules?

- A. To emphasize the value of the capitalist system.
- B. To introduce different approaches to obtaining new land.
- C. To advocate that all should be rewarded when one acquires wealth.
- D. To challenge George's idea that men should have an equal right to the land.

30) What does "a rags-to-riches myth" refer to in the last paragraph?

- A. A modified version of Monopoly.
- B. Darrow's success after selling the game.
- C. Parker Brothers' purchase of Magie's patent.
- D. The popularity of the game on college campuses.

31) Which of the following would best describe Magie's feelings toward today's version of her game?

- A. Excited.
- B. Relieved.
- C. Doubtful.
- D. Displeased.

D

In the paper Diversity, Constance Woodman, a doctoral graduate student of Texas A & M University, and Professor Donald Brightsmith shared their findings from a project with Chris Biro, a globally recognized free-flight trainer, which included documenting Biro's training process step by step so that conservationists can apply his methods when releasing birds into the wild.

英语试题(长难句)第5页(共10页)

Biro has trained 400 students on how to free-fly their birds, but his process was only captured by video previously.

“We have colleagues raising and releasing birds, but their main objective is conservation and they have no chance to write up a lot of the science,” Brightsmith said. “A & M’s role in this project is to ensure this information gets put into a format so others can read, criticize, use and improve it. If information hasn’t made it into scientific literature, it’s not improving future parrot(鸚鵡) conservation.”

Woodman and Biro spent years training three flocks(群) of multiple parrot species using Biro’s techniques, thoroughly documenting every step. These 37 birds, which collectively spent 500 months in free-flight, were hand-raised from chicks to build a strong bond with the trainer before being gradually taught new commands and introduced to increasingly complex environments to learn the skills necessary to safely fly in open, uncontrolled areas. They learned to recognize and even frighten natural enemies, and avoid unsafe situations.

Traditionally, attempting to release hand-raised parrots has resulted in birds that show little fear of humans, increasing their chances of being trapped by hunters. Biro used a “kernel flock”, human-socialized birds trained in free-flight, to teach survival behaviors to other parrots. This technique being applied to establishing new bird flocks in the wild allows conservationists to release wild birds without having to train them themselves, cutting the difference when human socialization is not desirable in wild birds.

After the “kernel flock” trains the non-socialized birds, it could be recalled and moved to another location, leaving behind a well-established settlement of wild parrots.

“The work we’ve done—spending years working with a group to learn how they do what they do and then translating that into something useful for scientists—is critical to moving conservation forward,” Woodman said.

32. What’s the main task of A & M in the project?

- A. Shooting training videos.
- B. Protecting hand-raised birds.
- C. Monitoring experimental data.
- D. Forming scientific literature.

33. What’s the top priority before training the 37 birds?

- A. Getting familiar with their behavior.
- B. Establishing emotional ties with them.
- C. Instructing them to follow commands.
- D. Teaching them to identify natural dangers.

34. What’s the point of using a “kernel flock” in wild birds?

- A. It prevents them settling in open space.
- B. It allows them to socialize with humans.
- C. It frees people from training them in person.
- D. It guarantees consistent intervention in them.

35. According to Woodman, what can they offer to scientists in parrot conservation?

- A. Lessons of failure.
- B. Valuable references.
- C. Global cases of reintroduction.
- D. Advanced evaluation systems.

My mom died on her 60th birthday. She had been diagnosed with breast cancer a few years before. The day she took her last 41, we each took turns saying goodbye.

When we were done, we all walked outside and sat looking at the river that 42 through my parents' backyard. A hummingbird buzzed by, and my sister said, "I bet that's mom." It was as if that 43 energy and charm she'd had when she was healthy had eventually been given back to her after so many months' being 44 to her bed, and had taken the form of this 45 little bird.

My mom was the sort of person who wanted everyone to have a great time. So, on her request, everyone wore a 46 hat to her funeral. There was also a DJ who played songs like Consider me gone by Sting. My mom never took herself too 47. She just wanted everyone to be happy.

Even when I was 48 with her for not letting me get a hotel room with my friends on prom(毕业舞会) night, or when she expressed 49 that I couldn't 50 my grades, I still love her so much. She listened to me without judgement. She respected my 51, yet left her door wide open if I ever needed to talk. She encouraged my strengths and 52 my weaknesses with humor, "Who cares if you don't have a great singing voice? Sing your heart out!"

She left us too soon, but she left her children with the memory of being loved 53. I realized the best way to 54 her memory was to find a way to love myself that much, even in her 55. What an incredibly gift that has been.

第二节 (满分 25 分)

阅读下面材料,根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段,使之构成一篇完整的短文。

As a single mother, I've never doubted my daughter Jane's dream to be a singer on the stage. At an early age, she was crazy about singing. Whenever she had a chance, she would sing to her heart's content. Her sweet and charming voice tended to get people around attracted to her songs.

Living in a small city, I took several odd jobs, determined to do everything in my power to support her. Soon after Jane attended school, her music teacher Mary noticed her talent by chance and volunteered to give her some guidance on how to sing. Jane practiced so hard that before long she made great progress in singing.

Unfortunately, one noon a year later, Jane was crossing the street when a careless driver knocked her down. She was rushed to hospital. When I hurried there, the doctor told me that my daughter would probably not stand on her own feet. I froze with shock, feeling as if I had been thrown into a dark world. Weak and dizzy, I was about to fall to the ground when someone took hold of me.

It was Mary, who got the news and raced here. She comforted me, saying firmly, "Grace, Jane needs you. You must stay calm and strong." I nodded. Having calmed down, I entered the ward with Mary.

That night, Jane recovered her consciousness (知觉) and opened her eyes. Holding her hand, I said, "My dear, everything would be fine." Mary comforted her gently, "I know you are a strong girl, Jane. Don't worry. We'll be standing by you." I was heartbroken to see tears streaming down Jane's cheeks.

After two months, we returned home from hospital. Her teachers and friends frequently visited her. Jane eventually accepted the fact that she would have to get around in a wheelchair. Never did she refer to the subject of singing again. I knew she was a nice and understanding girl, who was afraid that talking about her original dream would upset the two of us.

注意:

1. 续写词数应为 150 左右;
