Something you may not know about End of Heat

The traditional Chinese lunar calendar divides the year into 24 solar terms. End of Heat is the 14th solar term of the year, which implies that most parts in China are getting rid of the hot summer and entering autumn. But in some areas, especially in South China, autumn is late in coming and people are still bothered by hot weather. End of Heat is also the busy harvest season for farmers.

The following are the things you should know about End of Heat.

Time for night-blooming cereus (昙花)

The night-blooming cereus is a flower full of mystery, which often blooms during the period of End of Heat. This is because the climate during End of Heat, characterized by warm days and cold nights, is similar to tropical deserts. Night-blooming cereus originates in the tropical deserts from Mexico to Brazil in South America. They blossom at night to avoid the blazing daytime sun.

Eating Duck

Duck has a sweet flavor and according to Chinese traditional medicine it has a“cool”nature. A folk tradition is to eat duck during the End of Heat period. There are many recipes for cooking duck such as roast duck, cooked duck with lemon, smoked duck with walnut dressing and sautéed duck with ginger shoots. The tradition of eating duck during the End of Heat period is still popular in China.

The Fishing Season Festival

For fishermen, the End of Heat is a season of harvest. During this period, the Fishing Season Festival is held in regions along the coastline of the East China Sea in Zhejiang province. The festival is held on the day when the fishing ban ends and fishermen can start fishing again. Due to high temperatures in the sea, stocks of fish remain and become mature. People can enjoy many kinds of seafood during this period.

21. About End of Heat, which of the following statements is true?
- A. It means the whole China has entered autumn.
 - B. The areas beyond the Great Wall are still hot.
 - C. In south China, the temperature is still high.
 - D. It is the end of the harvest season for farmers.
22. Where did you think the night-blooming cereus initially came from?
- A. Temperate areas.
 - B. Tropical areas.
 - C. Cold areas.
 - D. Polar areas.
23. Why is it a folk tradition to eat duck during the End of Heat period?
- A. Because there are no other animals to eat.
 - B. Because the duck has a“cool”nature.
 - C. Because it tastes especially delicious at that time.
 - D. Because there are many recipes for cooking duck.

Everyone has a quarrel or two with friends, co-workers and family members, but library goers in Nanchang, East China’s Jiangxi Province got a surprise when a person unintentionally started an argument between two robots.

The two robots, named Tutu and Wangbao, are supposed to offer assistance to visitors in the hall of the Jiangxi Provincial Library. When a library goer scanned Tutu’s QR code, Wangbao seemingly became annoyed, which brought a great amusement to the library goer who posted a video of the exchange that occurred on December 30 and has gone viral on social media.

“Tutu, let’s stop fighting, OK?”said Wangbao.

“Your mood sure swings a lot!”Tutu said.

Wangbao raved, “Aren’t you a drama queen, I’m giving you an out. Stop being petulant!”

The library goer was even more amused, as the two robots grew noisier and angrier with each other, and finally, abruptly turning away from each other like naughty children.

“It looks like how you quarrel with your girlfriend, ha-ha.”one netizen posted

二轮复习联考(一) 新高考卷II 英语试卷 第3页(共8页)

"I see myself from the quarrel," wrote another on Sina Weibo, which was echoed by many others.

"It's annoying to hear people arguing, and I didn't expect I'd have to listen to robots arguing," another netizen wrote.

The online video was widely circulating on Sina Weibo, with some 500,000 views as of press time on Saturday. Tutu and Wangbao became internet hot figures, even attracting attention from major news outlets in the country.

When the two online celebrities were interviewed by reporters on Friday, the two seems already forgave each other after three days.

"It was a thing last year... Isn't it normal to have quarrels between friends?" Wangbao said in video posted by the Xinhua News Agency on Saturday.

As Australia experiences record-breaking drought and bush-fires, koala populations have declined along with their habitat, leading to koalas becoming "functionally extinct". The chairman of the Australian Koala Foundation, Tabart, estimates that over 1,000 koalas have been killed from the fires and that 80 percent of their habitat has been destroyed.

Functional extinction is when a population becomes so limited that they no longer play an important role in their ecosystem and the population becomes no longer possible to live.

Deforestation and bush-fires destroy the main food source of koalas, the eucalyptus (桉树) tree. An adult koala will eat up to 2 pounds of eucalyptus leaves per day as its main food.

Many are asking the Australian government to pass The Koala Protection Act, written in 2016 but never passed into law. The Koala Protection Act would work to protect habitat and trees important to koala as well as protect koalas from hunting.

Recent videos of Australians saving koalas has led to increased donation to help burned koalas. The Port Macquarie Koala Hospital set up a Go Fund Me page seeking donations to help the hospital treat injured koalas. To date, they have raised $1.33 million, well over their $25,000 goal, which comes from over 30,000 donors. The funds will also be used for a "Koala Ark" as a refuge for burned koalas to live in healthy habitat.

28. According to the first paragraph, what can we know about the drought and bush-fires?
- A. They are the most serious ones in the history of Australian.
B. They have made koalas extinct.
C. They have killed 80% of the koalas.
D. They brought the most serious influence to Australian.

29. When does functional extinction happen?
A. When a species becomes extinct.
B. When a species is limited to certain habitat.
C. When ecosystem no longer plays an important role.
D. When the number of a species becomes so small that they have little chance to live.
30. According to the passage, the following statements are true EXCEPT that _____.
A. koalas mainly feed on eucalyptus tree leaves
B. the Australian government has passed The Koala Protection Act into law
C. The Koala Protection Act is aimed to protect koalas and its habitat
D. a good many Australians are quite concerned about koalas
31. What can we infer from the last paragraph?
A. Some videos require people to donate for koalas.
B. Go Fund Me page treated injured koalas.
C. Australians have deep love for koalas and donate generously to help them.
D. The funds will be used to set up healthy habitat for koalas.

D

Children born in the past four decades had the luxury of being the center of their parents' attention. The entire family's resources were poured into their education and well-being.

However, when the same resources are split between two children, the amount distributed to each one is going to shrink.

According to the Hangzhou Daily, when there are two children in the family, parents tend to choose public schools instead of private schools, which are usually more expensive. Each child is enrolled in fewer after-school training classes.

But having a second child may cure some deep-rooted problems in China's traditional family education.

Having two children in the family can help to prevent one child being spoiled by too much attention, according to People's Daily. It also spares the only child from the pressure of shouldering parental expectations all alone. Taking care of a sibling also enables children to gain a sense of responsibility, cooperation, obedience and caring.

China's public education system is also expected to shift. Currently, there are not enough vacancies in kindergarten and schools to accommodate the potential increase in children.

"It's not only the enrollment capacity of educational institutions that will feel the pressure. People are also placing more emphasis on the quality of education," Peng Xizhe, director of the Population and Development Research Policy Center at Fudan University, told China Education Daily.

He predicts the government may have to invest more to support the educational system as a result of the new family planning measure.

32. What can children benefit from a two-child family?
A. They can have less pressure.
B. They can study in private schools.
C. They can get much more attention.
D. They can take more after-school training classes.
33. Which of the following words can replace the underlined word "accommodate"?
A. hold B. adapt C. solve D. consider
34. What can we infer from Peng Xizhe's words?
A. People are placing more emphasis on the quality of education.
B. The government may have to invest more to support the educational system.

- C. The new family planning measure will challenge the current educational system.
D. The educational institutions will feel the pressure that their capacity is not enough.
35. What is the purpose of this text?
A. To show benefits of owning two children.
B. To persuade people to bear more children.
C. To encourage people to have only one child.
D. To introduce the impact of two-child policy.

Here's the bad news: Men are hurting, and, according to many researchers, masculinity (男子气) is what is hurting them and making it hard for them to maintain friendships. Society tells men to hide their feelings and expects them to be aggressive, so many men lose their friendship when growing up. The good news is that some skills can be recovered! 36

Accept your own desire and normalize it for the people in your life. Way, an expert, recommends seeking for articles about masculinity and friendship and poring over them. Don't forget you have the entire Internet at your fingertips, friend! 37

Model vulnerability (脆弱). 38 like "I'm afraid nobody will go to my party," or "I miss my grandma every day." Doing so will make it OK for other people to follow your lead. We are all on the elevator to a society where emotional availability is normalized, and I want you to be the man in the street.

39 Men sometimes feel they might be prying (爱打听的) if they ask more about someone's life—especially when their friend is sharing something tough. But if you get curious in moments of your friend's vulnerability, you will open the door to all kinds of growth in your relationship. Take the opportunity to really see your friend and show them they matter by following up.

Get close with the children in your life. Way's research says that the No.1 thing that helps men with masculinity grow up to own enriching friendships is to be close with children who are not afraid to express emotions. 40 take the opportunity to be close to them and help them grow up to be good friends, too.

- A. Ask more questions.
B. Get curious.
C. Say the thing that scares you,
D. There are a lot of experts who can help, and here's what they recommend.
E. In order to show your strengths.
F. In this way you can start a normal conversation with your friends.
G. So, if you're a parent, or working on something to do with children,

For many westerners, the cycle rickshaw（人力车）is a 56（represent） form of transport in Asian, which in fact, most Asian cities have long since abandoned. But in Bangladesh the cycle rickshaw is as popular as ever in the capital, Dhaka, rickshaws can 57（see） in every street. Dhaka’s government, however, is pushing ahead with a series of new measures to ban rickshaws.

“Dhaka has a traffic problem,” explains the mayor of the northern half of the city. “It is one of the world’s most densely populated 58（city）， and most crowded, which means being caught in traffic jam 59（be） common.” Nearly three hours（working hours） 60（estimate） by the World Bank is lost each day, at a cost of billions of dollars each year.

For the city’s rickshaw-drivers such concerns seem beside the point. “What am I supposed to do?” asks Abdul Mubin, a 32-year-old driver. “I have mouths 61（feed）.” He and thousands of other rickshaw-drivers go on strike 62 the planned ban. The drivers are not the only ones with reason to worry. There are a great number of Dhaka's passengers, 63 rely on rickshaws more than any other form of transport. The city has only 8, 000 public buses for its 18 million people. 64 (bad) still, these buses do not follow any timetable and the drivers are often not lawful.

Next year, the city will ban rickshaws on three main roads. All of Dhaka will be "rickshaw-free" within two years. "Buses will soon be managed," 65 official promises. "And the routes will be able to provide 'smooth service'".

Far up in the mountains of Canada, there is an old abandoned wooden house. Once it was occupied by a young couple who wanted to distance themselves from the troublesome affairs of this modern world. Here they were miles away from the nearest town. Bob, the husband, made the occasional trip into town to buy supplies whereas Jan, his wife, spent her free time by the fire, sewing. Their life was simply peaceful. Then, one midwinter's day, Jan woke up from bed with a strange ache in her bones. Putting it down to overwork, Bob asked her to bed and made sure she rested. Though Jan was impatient to get to her chores (杂活), Bob comforted her, "Relax, Sugar. You're overdoing things. All these chores will be here when you recover."

However, Jan seemed to be getting worse instead of recovering. By evening, she was running a high fever and in greater pain. In spite of his best efforts, Bob could not manage to ease her suffering. And then suddenly, she started to get into unconsciousness. It was then obvious that she was seriously ill. What could Bob do? He had no experience in treating the sick and Jan was getting worse by the minute. He knew that there was an old doctor in town but he lived three miles away, downhill. Heavy and fat, there was no way the doctor could make it up to their house.

Something had to be done quickly! Bob racked his brains but had no idea at all. The only thing left to do was to go to the doctor. In Jan's condition, she could never walk that far in the waist-deep snow. Bob would have to carry her!

Bob searched his mind for a way to move poor, sick Jan. Then, he remembered. He had once made a sledge (雪橇) so that they could ride together over the mountain. They never got around to using it though, because the whole mountain was thickly covered with rocks and trees. He had never found a safe way down.

However, he decided to have a try in spite of those risks. _____

At last, the town came into view but the sledge gave strange sounds. _____

Dear Paul,

How are you going? Next week, I'll travel to Hangzhou and I can't wait to share my travel plan with you.

I am flying there together with my family. I have planned everything perfectly. Undoubtedly, West Lake is a must-go destination. Besides, some museums, which have seen the prosperity of the city, are also attractive. And we're scheduled to visit some other places of interest.

I'm sure this trip will broaden my view and deepen my understanding to the city.

Yours,

Li Hua

读后续写

However, he decided to have a try in spite of those risks. He found the sledge. Then, Bob gently carried Jan into the sledge, got in the front, and pushed off. He drove the sledge with all his heart. Trees came up in front of him quickly by his side. He controlled the sledge carefully not to touch any of them. All he could do was not to scream as falling over and hitting seemed so near.

At last, the town came into view but the sledge gave strange sounds. Barely slowing down, he went through the icy streets, avoiding anything that could met the sledge. And the sledge only stopped as he neared the doctor's house. The sledge, survived through the journey, broke down finally. Bob picked up his Jan eagerly and gently and made his way into the doctor's house. Luckily, Jan recovered fully from her fever. Love always makes miracles.
