Dear Mr. Richard Sears,

I am writing to invite you to give us a lecture for the Chinese Traditional Culture Week to be held in my school next month.

As the founder of the website called Chinese Etymology, you are known as “Uncle Hanzi”. You have researched into how Chinese characters developed in different periods and established a database. Because of your hard work, Chinese culture is better known in the world now. So, will you give us an one-hour lecture, sharing your research and personal story?

We are looking forward to your early reply.

Yours,

Li Hua

第二节(满分 25 分)

One possible version:

Just then, I was surprised to find one piece of glass in the window just below the awning badly cracked. “How dangerous it is! If it fell, it would.” I dared not continue to imagine what would happen next, noticing the piece of glass which was on the edge of dropping. It would fell on the very place where Jack sat down to read books every morning. A flood of fear welled up in me at the thought of this terrible scene. At that moment, the yellowish egg strains were more a warning from the kids than a bad trick when I saw the cracked glass again.

Feeling a sense of luck instead of anger, I began handling the cracked glass. After Jack was called away from the place in case of danger, I climbed the ladder slowly, approached gradually and touched the glass gently. It was no wonder that the piece fell on the bench where Jack sat just now. Jack widened his mouth at the sight of the fallen glass pieces. Seeming to be lost in thought for a moment, then Jack said to me and my wife. “I am so lucky to have those ‘bad’ kids”. “We might take a positive view of ‘bad things’ in life”, said I.
