第四部分 写作 (共两节, 满分 40 分)

第一节 (满分 15 分)

Dear Sir,

I am writing to recommend two types of books. The first type is fantasy novels, which are very popular with students. Some examples of good fantasy novels would be The Lord of the Rings series and the Harry Potter series.

The second type of book I would like to recommend is biographies. Good biographies such as Marie Curie: A Life will inspire students to study harder and reach their goals. In addition to biographies of historical figures, biographies of contemporary figures can be considered.

I look forward to reading more fantasy novels and biographies in the reading room soon.

Yours,

Li Hua

第二节 读后续写 (满分 25 分)

Suddenly, Peter came across the same old man again. He ran to him and begged for help. "Help me! I'm lost! Have you seen my brother? He looks just like me." The old man looked at Peter and said, "Surely I've seen that kind and helpful child. But, why should I help you? You refused to help me. Now go away from here!" Then Peter left. Soon, he saw lights down the hill. It looked like a village. Finally he got to the village with aching legs.

At the entrance of the village, he met the same girl he had refused to help. He asked her to find him shelter for the night, but the girl turned him down, "Spend the night under that tree. You deserve it!" How ashamed he felt! At dawn, Peter heard a voice calling his name. It was Handy and the little village girl. Peter rushed to Handy, "Thank god, brother! Now I realize how important to help others." Peter and Handy looked and behaved the same from that day.

Text 1

M: Look at the boats on the lake. I'd like to hire one and sail to the other side.

W: Great idea. My feet are tired from walking.

M: We can sit on the grass and eat our lunch afterwards.

Text 2

W: Phew, just in time. If I hadn't run for this train, I would have had to walk home. Now I'm out of breath.

M: You should give up smoking.

W: I have never smoked, and I exercise every day.

Text 3

W: I thought making this sweater would be a relaxing thing. How wrong I was!

M: Well, before you get angry, is there anything I can do to help?

W: Not really. The pattern just doesn't make sense. The instructions are impossible.

Text 4

M: This beautiful sofa folds out to become a bed.

W: Oh, that's a good idea. Space is limited in my house. How much is it?

M: You're in luck. The factory gave our shop a discount, so we can pass that on to the customer.

Text 5

W: Do you like my ring? My husband said the stone matches my eyes.

M: So it does. Did you know blue eyes like yours are becoming rarer? Brown is taking over.

W: My sister's are green.

Text 6

M: OK, what's the joke?

W: Sorry?

M: Why are you laughing? Did you win something?

W: No, it's nothing like that. When I got off the bus just now, a man's hat was blown off by the wind, and it landed on someone else's head. It was so funny.

M: You didn't need to catch the bus. I would have collected you in the car.

W: It's OK. It was very convenient. My meeting finished at 11 am and the bus was ten minutes later. It was only a twenty-minute ride home.

Text 7

W: Steven, it's your turn to do the shopping this week.

M: Are you sure? It hasn't been long since I did it last time.

W: Yes, you always follow on from Margo. I think you know that.

M: OK, what do we need?

W: We're getting low on potatoes, rice, carrots and we have no sugar left at all.

M: It's quite a bad time for me. I'm due to meet my professor this afternoon to discuss my study plan.

W: Oh, we all have other things to do. Caroline has exams and Peter has called to say one of his parents is ill.

M: Fair enough. Do you mind if I borrow your bike? I'll be able to get back to college quicker that way.

W: That'll be fine. I'll write a list of things we need.

Text 8

W: Are we still on for this weekend?

M: Absolutely. I've been excited all week for this trip. What time you'll want to leave?

W: Early I think. Why don't you come pick me up around eight? I'll buy us breakfast before we hit the road.

M: Alright. I've already packed us lunches, so we won't have to worry about anything until dinner then.

W: I'm so excited. The ride there is going to be so beautiful with all the autumn colors.

M: I can't wait for Eric to show us his new house. I was surprised when he bought it, but the pictures he sent are all amazing. Plus, the weather is going to be perfect.

W: Yes. His backyard is bigger than the park we used to play at. I think he even has a pond.

M: Well, that's why he moved away from the city. He could never buy a place like that here, no matter how much money he spent.

W: He's lucky to have such a flexible job. Maybe I need to go back to school like he did.

Text 9

W: Did you see the strange lights in the sky?

M: Yes, I did. I was watching TV when my wife called me outside last night. She thought she saw something two or three nights ago as well, but it was just a plane.

W: Well, last night's wasn't a plane, was it?

M: Definitely not. I saw one light at first, then another - and then a really bright one. They were there for ages, moving across the sky.

W: But what were they? I've seen shooting stars before, but never anything like that.

M: I read recently that an old Russian satellite was expected to crash back to Earth.

W: I bet it was that.

M: Me too.

W: That is so dangerous, though. What if it landed on someone's house?

M: Oh, I think those things burn up before they ever reach land.

W: I wonder why we haven't seen anything about it on the TV news.

M: Maybe we were the only ones who saw it, though I doubt it.

W: There was nothing in the newspapers either, as far as I could see.

M: Tell you what, I'll have a look on the Internet for strange objects in the sky over this area.

W: Good idea. If anyone saw the lights, they'd be sure to post something about it there.

Text 10

W: A test of the ability of birds to solve problems has revealed how traffic noise affects their skills. Scientists set some wild birds a series of tests - some with traffic noise and others without. They found that the sound of passing cars harmed the birds' ability to find food. The results suggest that noise pollution has previously unknown consequences for wild creatures. Prof Christopher Templeton from Pacific University in Oregon, US, led the study. He carried it out in a laboratory. Researchers set the bird tasks both in a quiet setting and a noisy setting with a record of road traffic. Prof Templeton explained that just hearing a car drive by was enough to affect their performance. One task involved getting food from some lids that the birds had to turn over to reveal the reward. In another test, the birds had to work out the way into a pipe that had a piece of food inside. Professor Templeton said they were almost twice as likely to do the tasks correctly if they don't hear traffic noise. There is more evidence that human-made noise has a variety of negative effects on wildlife. It's getting really difficult to find totally quiet environments not touched by human noise. But we can change road surfaces, or think about redesigning a vehicle's tires. There's great possibility for trying to reduce noise.
