Dear Eric,

Thanks for leading me to some wonderful scenic spots in London.

To begin with, I appreciated the unique land- scape of London which I had only seen on the Internet or on TV before. Of all the tourist attractions we visited, the Big Ben and the British Museum left me the deepest impression. More importantly, this trip helped me learn more about the connections between Chinese culture and British culture.

It was a pity that we had only a day for our trip, which made me a little regretful. How I wish we could have another trip soon. Thanks again and I'm looking forward to our next trip together.

Yours

With the approach of the College Entrance Examination, we senior three students are under great pressure. It is acknowledged that a certain degree of stress is beneficial to us, but too much stress is certainly harmful.

As for me, there was a time when I was so stress but had had great pressure, which greatly affected my life and study. I couldn't fall asleep at night and I often woke up suddenly at midnight. As a result, I had great difficulty focusing on what the teacher said in class and it disturbed me a lot. At a loss, I went to the teachers for some advice on how to cope with pressure.

First of all, we should face the pressure appropriately. Pressure is inevitable in our daily life, so we can't be afraid of it and try our best to cope with them. Secondly, tell our pressure to others. Talking is a very effective way to ease pressure, and during the talking we may get some suggestions and solutions. Finally, trust ourselves. We are supposed to believe in ourselves that we can deal with any problems.

I found them beneficial to my study, and it is my hope that everyone can reduce too much stress and live a relaxed happy life.
