Last week, our class held a heated discussion concerning whether cloning techniques should be developed. Opinions differ greatly from person to person.

68% of the students are in favor of its development. They hold the strong belief that cloning is bound to benefit the human being. As far as they are concerned, one of the advantages of cloning is that we can clone human body organs for medical use. In addition, it is because of cloning techniques that large quantities of food can be produced to meet people's needs. On the contrary, 32% of them strongly object to it, for it has raised a storm of moral questions. Worse still, some evil leaders even want to clone themselves to attain their ambitions.

However, in my view, cloning will pay off as long as we undertake to use it properly.
