第一节: Possible version

An Electric Bike Accident That Should Not Have Happened

Last Friday afternoon, I was on my way to school, riding my electric bike, when I heard a huge noise in front of me. There, at the crossing lay an electric bike and a car stopped. Obviously an accident happened. The rider, who appeared to be a student, was lying on the ground, bleeding. It seemed that the student didn't follow the traffic rules and was hit by a rushing car. The rider was rushed to hospital soon.

Safety must go first. I strongly appeal to all students to firmly observe traffic rules so that we won't get hurt. Please wear your helmet and obey traffic rules.

第二节: Possible version

Then she decides to give something else a try. Her office is not really so far from her university, so one day after work she tries walking there. As she walks down the street, looking at all the people, the shops, and the movement in the city, she remembers how much she hates being stuck on the bus in traffic. In fact, she finds that she can get to class almost as fast by walking. And she is so much happier when she arrives!

When the new term begins, Valerie maintains her healthy habits. She sets time aside on the weekends to study and do her assignments. Because she is sleeping and eating better now, she can finally concentrate and needs to spend much less time studying. It is a huge improvement. Valerie saves money on food and transportation, she has much more energy, she feels less stressed, and her grades are better. She is glad she finally started to take care of herself. Now she finally enjoys all of her different activities and feels happy about her life.
