第四部分 写作 (共两节, 满分 40 分)

第一节 (满分 15 分)

Hello, everyone! It's my honour to speak here today.

Volunteering is of great importance and doing voluntary work is a win-win situation for all involved.

Take my experience for example. Last week, I participated in a voluntary activity called "Making an effort to beautify our community" where volunteers assisted to sweep roads, pick up rubbish and take care of roadside plants. Through this activity, not only have I made our community more attractive, but also I've benefited a lot, such as improved physical and mental health, a sense of purpose and deeper self-confidence.

Let's make good use of our spare time and take part in voluntary activities!

第二节 (满分 25 分)

Then it occurred to me that I needed to fetch more things. Without any delay, I got out and ran to get a pillow and a bottle of water. At the last minute, I remembered to get the flashlight out of the drawer, and then went back into the bathtub. I could hear things hitting the roof of the house. So scared was I that I attempted to pull the blanket over my head, holding on tight to the pillow! I tried to block out the noise of the thunder and rain and wind, but it was impossible.

After what seemed like hours, I suddenly heard Dad calling my name loudly. I called back and the door was opened. Daddy came in, with rain dropping down his face. He hugged me and told me everything was okay. I just hugged him back as tight as I could. My brothers and mom came in then, and everyone started talking about how wild the storm was. There were trees down everywhere, and some were across roads. That's why it took them all so long to get home. Patting me on the head gently, dad praised me for my calmness and bravery in times of emergency. The storm kept on, but it didn't matter. We were safe!

Text 1

M: Hi, Betty. This is Louise. I'm on vacation in Mud Beach.

W: Are you enjoying your stay?

M: Oh. The weather is cold and cloudy. The restaurants are expensive, and the food isn't good. In fact, I'm having problems with my stomach.

Text 2

M: Excuse me, I can't find the lockers. The community is so large. The delivery guy just gave me the parcel information.

W: You're going in the opposite direction. They're at the South Gate, near the bakery store.

Text 3

M: Hello, everybody. Follow me along the street to find more snacks. This is Bean And Rice Noodles, one of Changsha's local and very special street foods!

W: Simon, stay closer to the camera. The viewers can see it more clearly.

Text 4

M: Hi, Alice. I am doing some shopping this Saturday. What's your plan?

W: A new English reading book has been published. A sale from Wednesday, June 10th through Friday is to be held in the bookstore.

Text 5

W: Excuse me, how can I get the tickets? I have booked two online for my grandson and me.

M: Oh, let me see. You can input these ID numbers on that machine. Don't worry. There's still twenty minutes before the performance starts.

Text 6

M: Hi, Alice. Do you often work out in your spare time?

W: Yes. I don't want to stay indoors all the winter. I'm crazy about any winter sport: skating, ski jumping and snowboard.

M: Great! You're so well-rounded. How about figure skating?

W: Oh, it's my favourite. I always went to see Linda's competition. She's so skilled and excellent. She's really a great ballet dancer on the ice.

M: Linda? Who's she?

W: My mother, once a professional athlete.

Text 7

M: Hello, I'm Rob.

W: I'm Feifei and this is The English We Speak.

M: So it should have been Neil presenting with you today but he's gone on holiday so you've got me instead.

W: Yes, I know—Neil's on holiday for two whole weeks!

M: Oh lucky Neil. Two weeks doing nothing—sitting on the beach in the sun.

W: Neil won't be sitting on any beaches. He's going to help teach English at a school in Spain.

M: What? He's gone to Spain to do the same work he does here—that's a bit of a busman's holiday. It's a strange choice for Neil.

W: It's but he's not only one—listen to these examples.

Text 8

M: Welcome to Lake Hotel.

W: I have made a reservation for a family room. My name is Kayla.
M: Please could I see your ID, Madam?
W: Here you are.
M: Right, Mrs. You've booked a room with a view and a king-size bed from the 4th to the 7th of July. Do you take credit cards?
W: Yes. I'll pay with this card then.
M: Er... Your card has been charged. Any additional charges during your stay, such as room service will be credited from your card. Our breakfast service starts from 6:00 am to 9:00 am in the dining hall on the second floor of our hotel and check-out time is after 12:30. Here are your keys. Do you have any other special requests?
W: Could you have my luggage sent out to the room? My husband is parking our car.
M: No problem. Enjoy your stay.

M: Hello, everybody. You must have noticed that some students have trouble sitting quietly. Others can sit still but find it hard to focus on classwork. Today, our guest, Chris Arran, will talk about it.
W: Good evening. The problem is called ADHD. Nearly 2.5 million elementary-school children in the United States have ADHD. That's about one out of ten kids.
M: En...Is ADHD a roadblock to achievement for our kids?
W: Well, Scott Kelly had trouble focusing in school. As a result, he earned low grades. However, he read a novel in college about space programs. The book motivated him to study harder and become a much better student and eventually, an astronaut.
M: Unbelievable.
W: Yes. And another example is about Ellison, a newspaper reporter. Her work earned her a Pulitzer Prize. She didn't know she had ADHD until her son filled out a form to find out if he had it. Reading the form, she realized that he did have ADHD and, so did she.
M: Really? What did she do then?
W: She told her son and herself: "A lot of successful people have ADHD, so wear it with pride. Learn to forgive yourself and try to learn a lesson from each one."
M: Good words.

Text 10

M: Hello everyone. A homesick camel recently melted the hearts of millions of Chinese people after it was reported to have travelled 100 kilometers to return to its former owner. Temur, the camel's former master, had sold it to another farmer back in October 2019. The man took it to his home 100 kilometers away and raised it in his hometown. The animal seemed to have adjusted fine to its new home, but on June 27, it ran away. The camel walked through the desert, crossing mountains, highways and fences. But when finally approaching its old home, it was caught back by its current owner. When its former owner heard about its risky journey, he decided to take it back. So Temur connected the buyer and decided to replace the old camel with a 3-year-old female. After he got it back, he was so heart-broken when he found that it had lots of wounds on its body, as it must have got crossing the fences. By Wednesday, the Pear video documenting the camel's journey had been watched 16 million times. Many viewers declared themselves touched by the animal.
